

TWO HUNDRED ENTOMBED IN THE SHAFT OF BURNING MINE AT KNOXVILLE, TENN.

HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE IN LARGE MINE EARLY THIS MORNING.

FEAR ALL NOW DEAD

Rescuers Driven Back By Cloud of Flames That Compelled Them to Give Up All Hope of Reaching Entombed Men Below Surface.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 9.—There was a dust explosion in the main mine of the Cross Mountain system near Knoxville early today and it is feared that at least two hundred miners who are thought to be in the shaft will die before aid reaches them.

Two Miles From Entrance. The explosion was apparently two miles from the entrance and the flames quickly communicated to all parts of the mine, driving out those who sought to rescue their companions. It is feared that the loss of life will be very heavy. The news of the explosion brought great throngs to the entrance of the mine.

Sent For Officials. The government rescue crew were immediately summoned and the officers of the mining company made plans to immediately start the work of possible rescue of those in the shaft. At eight-thirty the mine had not been entered and a few minutes later the flames came to the very mouth, making it impossible to go inside.

Heavily Manned. The mine is usually manned by two hundred miners, but it is thought that only about one hundred had entered the shaft prior to the dust explosion blast. The mine is owned and operated by the Knoxville Iron Company, and is about thirty-five miles from Knoxville.

No Hope. Rescue work was checked before eleven o'clock. Great billows of flames began to pour from the openings. Rescue parties were hurried back by the flames. Hope for the imprisoned miners has now dwindled almost to despair.

Three Escaped. Of all the men who went into the mine this morning, only three have escaped. They were John Lang, Sam Farmer and Mort Hattmaker. They were in one of the lateral shafts at the time of the explosion. Warned by the blast rumble they escaped before over taken by the flames.

Saw Bad Signs. These men observed "bad signs" as they entered the mine. They believe the exact location of the blast is at least two miles in the interior and eight hundred feet from the mountain crest.

Various Estimates. The number of men entombed is now variously estimated at from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred and sixty-eight. On account of the darkness and the smoke and flames it is impossible for volunteer rescuers to proceed into the mine.

KING OF SIAM

BEING CROWNED THIS WEEK.

Bangkok, Siam.—During the first two weeks in December the elaborate ceremony surrounding the new king of Siam are taking place. Perhaps in no other country on the globe does so much formality and routine enter into the crowning of a monarch. The new king is a progressive type, educated in Europe and will be an important factor in introducing modern methods in this country which has for years been one of the most backward of the orient. He is a comparatively young man under 30, and is very popular with the people.

CHANG HSUI BURNED BY CHINESE REBELS

City Twelve Miles From Peking Completely Destroyed—Foreigners Are Reported Safe.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Eng., Dec. 9.—The Chinese revolutionists have destroyed the town of Chang Hsui, situated about twelve miles southwest of Peking, according to a special news dispatch from Tsin Sing. All foreigners are safe.

CHRISTMAS RUSH TO EUROPE HAS BEGUN

Dozen Trans-Atlantic Steamships Have Left New York Within Past Forty-eight Hours.

New York, Dec. 9.—A dozen trans-Atlantic steamships have departed from New York for the past forty-eight hours taking out 10,000 or more passengers. This marks the flood tide of the exodus of those who go abroad each year to spend Christmas in their native lands. Steamship men say that the holiday season traffic this year is likely to fall a little short of the previous high record, though no one would ever think so to see the huge decks along the North River. Immigrants and natives of other countries of southern Europe make up a large percentage of the outgoing steamer passenger lists. They come mostly from the country east of the Mississippi river. Other steamships carry out large passenger lists made up entirely of Scandinavians, and those from northern Europe. A majority of these come from the Northwestern States.

WAS BORN IN REIGN OF KING GEORGE III

Alexander Renau of Halleybury, Ontario, Celebrates His One Hundred and Sixty Birthday Tomorrow.

Halleybury, Ont., Dec. 9.—Alexander Renau of this place, who is believed to be the oldest resident of Canada and undoubtedly the oldest native-born Canadian, will celebrate his one hundred and sixtieth birthday tomorrow. Renau was born in St. Paul, Quebec, December 10, 1845. At the time of his birth George III. occupied the English throne and Napoleon was the dictator of Europe. Since early youth Renau has been a constant user of tobacco. He also was a moderate drinker of alcoholic beverages until a few years ago.

DISMISSED ACTION AGAINST RAILROAD

Case of Whitney T. Astin, Adm. Against St. Paul Road to Recover Damages For Death of B. C. Astin Practically Settled.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Judge Grimm in the session of the circuit court yesterday afternoon, dismissed the jury and action in the case of Whitney T. Astin, adm. vs. C. M. & St. P. railway company, following the assurance of a practical settlement.

The action was brought against the defendant company to recover damages to the amount of $10,000, following the death of Benjamin C. Astin on Dec. 20, 1908, from injuries alleged to have been sustained when the buggy in which Astin was riding was struck by a St. Paul train on the company's grade crossing on Eastern avenue.

Astin was sixty-two years old at the time of his death. Damages were sought by the administrator of his estate, his son, for the support of the deceased's widow, Amanda E. Astin.

The case had been referred to the supreme court on a technically and returned for trial. Attorney J. D. H. Ryan appeared for the plaintiff and Thomas S. Nolan for the company. Details of the settlement have not been wholly arranged and the exact amount of the settlement is withheld at present.

TAXATION, SUBJECT FOR TWILIGHT CLUB

Good, Program Arranged for Meeting of Club on Tuesday Evening of Next Week.

Topics of vital interest to the citizens and business men relative to the problems of taxation in state, county and city will be discussed by able and well-informed speakers at the regular December meeting of the Twilight club next Tuesday evening. The program arranged is as follows:

1. The New Income Tax Law.

2. A. As affecting the Individual.—Stanley C. Dunfield.

3. A. As affecting Corporations.—M. C. Joffe.

4. Out County Equalization Equitable.—E. P. Starr.

5. Should the Entire State be Re-Assessed.—E. P. Sniffley.

6. The Expenditure of Public Monies.—A. E. Matheson, George Sutherland.

M'NAMARAS TO BE IN PRISON BEFORE GRAND JURY MEETS

Inquiry Into Alleged Dynamiting Conspiracy Postponed Until Tuesday, at Which Time Brothers Will Be in Prison.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Los Angeles, Dec. 9.—The McNamara brothers probably never will testify before the federal grand jury here. It was announced that after the session today of the grand jury, which is enquiring into the alleged dynamiting conspiracy, it would not convene again until next Tuesday and it was said to be certain that by that time Jos. B. and John J. McNamara would have begun their sentences at the San Quentin state prison.

The emphatic declaration that they would not divulge what they know of the alleged conspiracy is said to have resulted in a plan to take the McNamara to the state penitentiary either today or tomorrow. Scores of witnesses appeared in town today in response to summons of which there were 128 issued within the last few days.

It is known that most of the San Francisco labor leaders will be asked to appear before the grand jury here. The names of those summoned have not been given out but it is understood that among them are D. A. Twelvetree, treasurer of the State Building Trades Council.

ONTARIO ELECTIONS HELD NEXT MONDAY

Temperance Issue Chief Issue of the Liberal Campaign—Conservatives Rely for Victory on Record.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Toronto, Ont., Dec. 9.—The provincial campaign in Ontario closed today and on Monday the voters will go to the polls to decide whether the administration of Sir James Whitney shall continue in power or give way to the Liberals. During the past few weeks the fight has become much more spirited than was promised at the outset. At the beginning of the campaign the Liberals naturally felt the discouragement resulting from the defeat of their party in the Dominion elections. It was believed at first that they would be unable to organize strongly against Whitney.

They were further handicapped by the loss of their veteran leader, A. G. MacKay, who retired at the beginning of the campaign. But a new leader was chosen in the person of Newton W. Howell and steps taken to put up a hard fight. Sir Howell, a strong Methodist, and a noted tactician, has made the temperance question the chief issue of the Liberal campaign. Ontario has already shown itself disposed to put severe restrictions on the sale of liquor but whether the people are ready to go to the lengths advocated in the Howell platform remains to be seen. Sir James Whitney is relying for victory chiefly on the progressive record of his administration. Among other things he advocates the discontinuance of the hydro-electric power commission and the creation of a new department of government with a cabinet minister at the head to take over the work carried on by the commission.

HOLLAND CELEBRATES ST. NICHOLAS FEAST

Corresponds to Feast of Christmas in Other Countries—Lasts for Period of Three Weeks.

Amsterdam, Dec. 9.—Queen Wilhelmina's subjects, both young and old, indulged this week in the customary annual celebration of the "Feast of St. Nicholas," which corresponds to the Christmas celebrations in other lands, though ending three weeks earlier. No festive in Holland exercises a more enchanting spell over both young and old. The original custom was for the children to place their little wooden shoes upon the hearth on the eve of St. Nicholas day, the legend being that on that night the holy man rode over the housetops on a snow-white steed accompanied by his little black servant, a Moorish negro. He was supposed to carry with him a large bag, full of toys and sweets of all kinds for the "good" children, and riding over the roofs he threw the presents in passing down the chimneys into the snow below, which were generally stuffed with a handful of straw by the evil-dreaded for the white horses. In early days the eve of St. Nicholas was given over to the children entirely, but by degrees the grownups have come in more and more to share in it, until now throughout Holland it is a great occasion for big and little ones alike.

RURAL TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION MET

Country School Teachers Held Their Association Meetings in High School.

The Rock County Rural Teachers' Association held their meetings today as planned and a large number gathered at the High School both morning and afternoon. Among the most important parts of the program was that of the Rock County County Teachers' Training School of this city. Their excellent work enabled them to add a great deal to the meetings and the methods of teaching which they are taught there were fully illustrated to the people present at the association. Interesting speakers with well-chosen topics were followed by lively discussions which were helpful in bringing out the points made by the speakers.

STOKES NO BETTER; MAY BE UNABLE TO ATTEND THE TRIAL

Trial of Chorus Girls Charged With Attempted Murder To Be Continued Monday.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Dec. 9.—There was no marked change today in the condition of W. B. Stokes although it was said at his home he had passed a restful night. It is doubtful whether he will be able to attend the trial of the two chorus girls whom he charged with trying to kill him when it is resumed on Monday.

The trial was adjourned yesterday afternoon with Miss Lillian Graham under cross examination on the stand where she spent most of the day telling her story.

Miss Graham's assertion in the witness chair that she was afraid of Stokes because her sister told her she had good reason to believe he murdered Al Adams, the former "policy king," was informally brought to the attention of District Attorney Witman who made this statement:

"At the proper time an inquiry will be made to determine the truth of the statement and its bearing upon the verdict of the coroner's jury in the Adams case. Stokes' attorney declared the girl's insinuation was 'pure tommyrot.'"

The jury that investigated Adams' death at Stokes' hotel Oct. 1, 1907, without leaving their seats, brought in a verdict of suicide.

BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS AT MADISON

Varsity Five Will Meet Beloit College Team in Opening Game Tonight—How Team Stands.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Dec. 9.—The University of Wisconsin basketball team will open the season by meeting Beloit college here tonight. Following the downstate comes Elgin for a game on Dec. 15, and four days later the team will go to Beloit for the final preliminary game and the first out-of-town contest. The conference season will open on a swing to Iowa City and to Evanston and will close away from home.

Three veterans are missed this season: ex-Captain Birch, forward; Adams, center and Al Hekhampt, guard. In the loss of Birch and Adams, the services of two of the best players that have appeared on the Wisconsin floor in many years are lost to the teaming early last year by an injury.

There remain, however, three veterans of last season, Captain Seville, forward; Stengel, forward and youngman, guard. With these three the Cardinals will start out on even terms with the other members of the conference and from the material now in sight Coach W. E. Meunwell expects to turn out a team that will be a credit to the institution.

Among the men now trying out for the team are Van Ghent, Van Iderem, Harper, Phelps, Neppel, Tanderberg, Bradish, Sande, Dewey, Johnson, Lang, Hoffer.

SHOT THREE TIMES BY AN UNKNOWN MAN

Stephen Berger of Milwaukee Murdered at Own Doorstep When He Answers Rapping Early Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Milwaukee, Dec. 9.—Stephen Berger, aged forty-six, was shot and killed by a man who appeared at his home at 143 Sixth street at 1:15 o'clock this morning. Berger heard a rap on a window and went to the door to investigate. He was shot three times in the head and fell dead, when the murderer escaped.

Several theories were advanced by the police soon after the shooting and detectives and patrolmen were assigned to the different leads in an effort to run down the murderer.

There is a report in the neighborhood that the man who shot Berger has been seen in the neighborhood before. It was said by people living near that a strange man had been seen early Friday evening near the Berger home and that he had visited the house several weeks ago.

The theory that the murderer sought to rob Berger and that he rapped on the window to ascertain the number of people in the house was also advanced.

Judge Here Wednesday: Judge Grimm will be at the circuit court Wednesday afternoon at which time the case of Roy Tammison vs. C. M. & St. P. railway company will be tried before a jury.

LORIMER INQUIRY CONTINUED TODAY BY THE COMMITTEE

Other News in Washington That Affects the Whole Nation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Dec. 9.—Maxwell Edgley, a Chicago lawyer who in 1907 led a legal fight to force the International Harvester company to pay more taxes, testified today before the Lorimer senatorial investigating committee that he had been offered $10,000 to do so. He said the offer was made by a Chicago lawyer named Tono who claimed to represent Clarence S. Darrow and Edgar A. Rancourt, the latter an attorney for the company.

Dismissal Letter. A formal report to the house today from the committee on expenditures in the interior department dismisses from congressional consideration the key-stone of which was the widely quoted "Dick to Dick" letter and the accusation that Richard S. Lytle was negotiating a monopoly of valuable Alaska harbor rights.

ALL ITALIANS TO BE ORDERED FROM CITY

Decree of Expulsion Has Been Issued Against All King Emmanuel's Subjects Living in Smyrna.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Berlin, Germany, Dec. 9.—A dispatch from Smyrna today says that a decree of general expulsion against all Italians has been issued there.

ARRAIGN ITALIANS ON MURDER CHARGE

Men Accused of Murder of Sheriff Radcliffe of Vilas County, Plead Not Guilty Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Wausau, Dec. 9.—Antonio Infario and Phillip Roberti, the two Italians accused of the murder of Sheriff Radcliffe of Vilas county, were formally arraigned in circuit court today and entered pleas of not guilty. The motion for separate trials for the defendants was dismissed by Judge Read. Both show the effects of their confinement and interior, especially, seems to be in feeble health.

EPIDEMIC OF MEASLES RAGES IN THE SCHOOLS IN VICINITY OF WAUSAU

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Wausau, Dec. 9.—The country districts in this county are reported to be in the grasp of a measles epidemic, one of the worst in years. The schools of districts number 2 and 7 have been closed on an account of the disease and others may find it necessary to do the same. There have been no deaths so far.

SUFFERS BROKEN BACK; HAS CHANCE OF RECOVERY

John Dougherty of Wausau, Aged 22, May Recover From Serious Injury.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Wausau, Dec. 9.—With his back broken, John Dougherty, aged 22, still lives and may recover from the injuries. He is a woodman and was struck across the back by a tree which he had felled in the woods near Milwaukee. He was brought to the hospital in this city today and the physicians say he has a chance for recovery.

ASPHALT CONTRACTOR IN SUIT AGAINST SUPERIOR TO RECOVER FOR PAVING.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Superior, Wis., Dec. 9.—Contractor P. McDowell of Duluth, has commenced suit against this city for the payment of a bill asphalt paving job recently completed by him. The duty refused to accept the job claiming that the specifications were not lived up to. A local firm of attorneys have been conducting a fight against the contractor since he commenced work.

WIDE AREA COVERED BY THICK FOG TODAY

Extends From Head of Lake Michigan to Fort Wayne and From Missouri River to Detroit.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Dec. 9.—A thick blanket of fog extended from the head of Lake Michigan as far west as the Missouri river, south to Springfield and as far as Fort Wayne, Ind., which tied up telephone and telegraph traffic in that territory today. Rain and less dense fog extended even further east and was likely to advance to the Atlantic coast, according to official reports of the United States weather bureau here.

SANFORD GUILTY OF CAUSING SIX DEATHS

Leader of "Holy Ghost and Us" Society Convicted by Jury, of Terrible Crime.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Portland, Me., Dec. 9.—The Rev. Frank W. Sanford, leader of the "Holy Ghost and Us" society, was found guilty of causing the death of six persons on board the yacht "Coronet" by the jury in the United States district court today. Sanford will be sentenced Dec. 13.

Four Sentenced to Hang and Rest to Life Imprisonment—Number Includes Two Chinese.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Dec. 9.—Twelve convicted murderers, four of whom have been sentenced to be hanged and the rest to life imprisonment, are now in the Cook county jail. This number is far in excess of the average in recent years. The condemned men include two Chinese, Joseph Kandilla convicted of wife murder today, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

MRS. VERMILYA HAS A PARALYTIC STROKE

Woman Suspected of Murder of Policeman Bismonte Reported to be in Critical Condition.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Dec. 9.—Mrs. Louise Vermilya, charged with having poisoned policeman Arthur Bismonte, and suspected of having poisoned nine other persons, was stricken with paralysis today, and Dr. Thomas Hogan, physician at the county jail, where the woman is detained, said her condition is critical.

HEAR MORE EVIDENCE IN FERRELL CASE

Taking of Testimony Resumed This Morning and Continued Until Late in Afternoon.

The taking of testimony in the case of the State versus Thomas Ferrell of the town of Tarrle, opened in the municipal court yesterday afternoon, was resumed this morning and continued until well along in the afternoon, after which the counsel for the state and defense gave their closing arguments to the jury.

The first to be called to the stand this morning was Deputy Sheriff C. W. Shinnell, a witness for the prosecution and he was followed by James Atkins and a number of others. The state's witnesses had all been heard by noon and Thomas Ferrell, the defendant, was the first to testify this afternoon. After he had been cross-examined, his brother Peter Ferrell was called to the stand. The case will probably not go to the jury until in the day.

CONTINUED MYSTERY AS TO WHEREABOUTS OF GENERAL REYES

Two Separate Reports Locate Missing General Near Washington and in Side Mexican Lines.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 9.—As a will-o-the-wisp, General Bernardino Reyes may lay claim to stiller honors before Mexico and United States secret service agents in search of the former Mexican army chief, who is accused of violation of the neutrality laws and in whose name several instructions are under way in the southern republic.

The first development in the renewed search for Reyes today was a statement from his family that they believed the general would arrive in Washington today.

They offered a telegram bearing a St. Louis date as proof that Reyes is still in the United States.

From another source a telegram was offered as proof that Reyes had crossed the border and had been seen in Carrizozo yesterday. Fifth telegrams bear Reyes' name. Vigilance on the part of the Mexican government troops was redoubled along the border today.

HUNDRED FISHERMEN ADRIFT ON ICE FLOE

Russians Who Have Been Fishing on Lake Polupur Caught on Drifting Ice.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Dorpat, Russia, Dec. 9.—Over one hundred fishermen are adrift on an ice floe on Lake Polupur from which the winter fish supply for St. Petersburg is drawn. As all the lake steamers have been laid up for the winter some time will elapse before rescuing parties can be sent out.

LOST IN BLIZZARD; YOUNG BRIDE DIES

Mrs. John L. Hadden, of Cambridge, Mass., Dies of Harshness Endured on Honeymoon Trip.

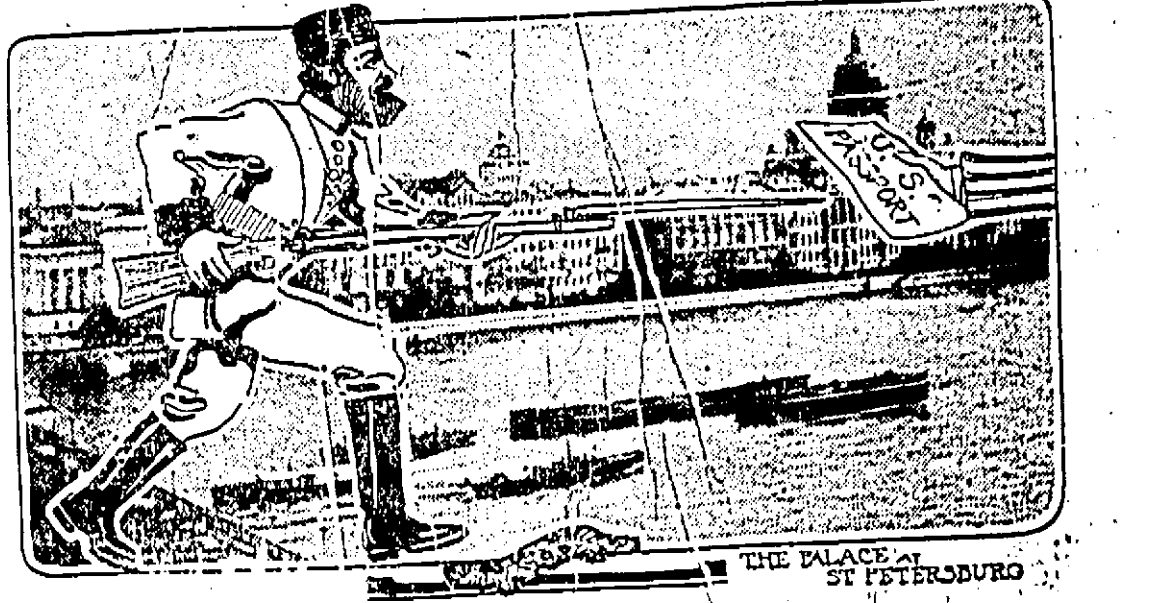

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Denver, Colo., Dec. 9.—As the result of hardship experienced by Mrs. John L. Hadden, a bride of three weeks, when she and her husband, an attorney of Cambridge, Mass., were lost in the mountains, for eight days, during which time a severe blizzard raged, Mrs. Hadden died on a train bound for Denver from Rifle, Colo., today.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadden went to Utah on their honeymoon trip. There they decided to make an open buggy journey across the mountains. On their second day out they became lost and for eight days they wandered about through the blinding snow in an effort to find a town, ranch house, or a cabin. They reached Meeker, Colo., where they remained until last night when they resumed their journey eastward.

JEWELS STOLEN FROM MRS. THAW RETURNED

Precious Stones Valued at $35,000 Taken From Residence Sent Back for Consideration.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 9.—Negotiations were reported to have been concluded today by which jewels valued at $35,000 stolen from the residence of Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., the evening of January 24, last, were returned. The jewels were committed by thieves of international reputation, who offered to return the jewels of Mrs. Thaw, paid the price demanded about $20,000.

RUSSIA MAINTAINS HER RIGHT TO BAR AMERICAN JEWS.

Washington, D. C.—In diplomatic circles it is now generally understood that Russia relies upon her interpretation of the treaty of 1832 and will continue to bar American Jews from the right of free entry to Russian ports. This in spite of the negotiations recently taken up by Secretary Knox asking that no discrimination be made against American citizens. Russia's reply is that rather than discriminate in favor of American Jews she would rather abrogate the original treaty and this, for commercial reasons, is not desired at Washington.

Congress is likely to take up the matter, particularly in the House of Representatives. Immigrant authorities on international law maintain that the treaty specifically specifies that any American citizen may have the right of entry to Russia on an American passport, but Russia relies upon the qualification in the last paragraph of the treaty which reads as follows: "American citizens may enter Russia on condition of their submitting to the laws and ordinances there prevailing."

In other words the regulations and ordinances imposed on Jews in Russia must apply to American Jews as well. Whether or not the State Department will see its way clear to arrange a new treaty with Russia is not known with any degree of certainty.

Work with a Will.
We are not sent into this world to do anything into which we cannot put our hearts. We have certain work to do for our bread and that is to be done strenuously; other work to do for our delight and that is to be done heartily; neither is to be done by halves or shifts, but with a will, and what is not worth this effort is not to be done at all.—John Ruskin.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

PITY AND COMFORT.

Isaiah said:
"As a father pitieth his children so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. As one whom a mother comforteth will I comfort you."

The father "pitieth."

The mother "comforteth."

As a rule, that is true of father and mother, though not always.

Once I saw a father turn heartlessly away from his son in the latter's direct need, though the boy well deserved his father's pity. It seemed to me no father could do such a thing.

Said Marie Kreflek of Chicago, a young girl who tried to commit suicide:

"Nobody loves me. Even my mother since she married my stepfather does not want me at home. The first chance I get I'll kill myself, for there is no use living."

These are exceptions to the rule that father pities and mother comforts. On the other hand—

Who that read the proceedings of the Beattie trial in Virginia, in which a young man was tried for the murder of his wife, was not impressed with the pity which that old gray haired man showered on his boy?

And here is a picture of the true mother type:

In one of the Chicago courts a young girl was charged with "delinquency."

That means she was a bad girl not a wicked girl. The judge hesitated as to his duty and then—

"If mother will take me back," sobbed the young prisoner, "I will be a good girl."

The mother was sent for. Gladly she took the errand daughter to her bosom, the tears of the two commingling, and the girl was "as one whom a mother comforteth." The court wisely gave the mother custody of the daughter.

The father pities.

The mother comforts.

Pity and comfort—how much we lack, forgetful humans need them!

In an age when God was thought to be a tyrant Isaiah gave a true picture of him in the holiest, choicest passage of sacred literature. In all the book there is but one other to compare with it:

"When thy father and thy mother forsake thee, then the Lord will take thee up."

GRIP LEFT HER WRECK PE-RU-NA RESTORED HER

Grip and Catarrh.

Mrs. Laura Berberick, No. 1111 Willow Ave., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Four years ago I had a severe attack of grippe, and was confined to bed, and when I came up after my sickness I was troubled with hoarseness and sibilant in head and throat, and was told I had catarrh. I took some medicine, but without much benefit."

"Every winter since, for four years, I have had in grippe (that winter three times), and the catarrh grew worse. I could not sleep at night. Was always troubled with sibilant, pain in my back and a terrible headache every morning when I woke up, and had no blood. I bought a bottle of Peru-na, and after using three bottles had relief. Peru-na has been a great benefit to my health. It has given me blood and strength. I can lie down and sleep without being troubled. I have no pain, headache, or noise in my head."

Mrs. A. L. Wetzel, 1023 Ohio St., Terra Haute, Indiana, writes:

"When I began to take your medicine I could not smell nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can both smell and hear. When I began your treatment my head was terrible, I had buzzing and chirping noises in my head. I followed your advice faithfully and took Peru-na as you told me. Now I might say I am well. Three months ago I went around like a mummy, now I feel brisk and active. I will always praise Peru-na."

WHAT THE WORD
"UNITED" MEANS

MANY PEOPLE DO NOT UNDER-STAND WHY THIS WORD IS USED BY THE "UNITED"
DOCTORS.

POINTS MISTAKEN by PUBLIC

AN INSIGHT INTO THE DIFFER-ENT SYSTEMS OF MED-ICINE.

Practically everyone who reads the daily papers in this country knows who the United Doctors are; knows that they are the famous medical specialists who have their new Janesville Institute on the 4th floor of the Hayes building, corner Milwaukee and Main streets, that they are the doctors who have become the court of last resort for sick people; knows that after all other doctors have failed and the patient has been given up as a hopeless case, he still has one chance—only one ray of hope in going to the United Doctors.

All these facts are well known, but how many know just why these specialists are called "United" Doctors? People think it is because there are so many of them in the association that they are called "United"; but the real reason why these famous specialists are called "United" Doctors is on account of the system of medicine which they have perfected and are now using with such remarkable success.

As is well known there are three main divisions of the different schools or systems of medicine in vogue today to which all of the old school doctors belong—Allopathy, Homoeopathy, and Eclecticism. Each hates and ridicules the other, although there is some good in each of them. Narrow-mindedness, prejudice and jealousy keeps them hopelessly apart to the injury of the suffering sick. Many a difficult case that could be cured by the combined knowledge of those three systems becomes incurable and hopeless because of this division. It is plain as daylight that it requires the combined truth of all of the systems of medicine to make a real doctor.

Now, that is just what the "United" Doctors are. They have "United" the three old systems of medicine into one new system, "United System." When you are treated by a "United" doctor, you are not treated by an Allopath, nor a Homoeopath, nor an Eclectic, but by a "United" doctor, a man who is not bound to any one-third of the medical knowledge of the world, but who is willing, anxious and capable of using all the "United" knowledge of ages to cure disease.

All who call on the United Doctors before Dec. 20th, are cured free, but they rich or poor. The free offer is made to secure a large number of patients quickly to show the public what this wonderful new treatment will do for sick people even after all other have failed. The only charge is for bare cost of medicine used on the case.

The diseases treated by the United Doctors are diseases of the Nervous, Blood, Skin, Stomach, Kidneys, Liver, and Bowels, including Rheumatism, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gout, Gravel, Paralysis, Weak Nerves, Heartburn, Epilepsy, Catarrh, Gonorrhea, Appendicitis, Asthma, Bronchitis, Scrofula.

The elevator in the building takes the sick to the door of the United Doctors' Institute.

C. A. Tomorrow
Afternoon.

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, at the Y. M. C. A. Prof. A. B. West will lead the regular men's meeting taking as the subject, "The Conservation of Human Resources." These meetings have been well attended all through the fall and winter and have been well attended by men and boys that it is thought that a larger room would have to be utilized. Interesting speakers on interesting topics for an hour Sunday afternoons have made this one of the important parts of the Y. M. C. A. work and all the members are urged to have a share in the benefit which may be derived from such activities. Bring a friend and enjoy

SPORT

SPORTING CALENDAR
FOR THE WEEK FULL

Many Activities in all Lines of Winter Sports Being Carried on in The City.

In spite of the fact that nothing startling is filled for this week in the sports calendar there are a number of very interesting events which will occupy the minds and interest of a large circle of fans in the city.

Things are moving fast in the Y. M. C. A. these days and much enthusiasm is being shown in the various activities carried on there. The classes are large and popular and under the direction of Physical Director Hartwell are improving rapidly both in character and size.

Basket ball is the absorbing and universal topic of the Y. members and every class has its practice in the gym as part of the work of the evening. Thanksgiving afternoon the Juniors played the Evansville Juniors and beat them very badly. No other games have been scheduled for them but it is probable that they may have another game or two with one of the city associations near here. A game has been scheduled for the intermediates for one week from next Wednesday night with the Evansville intermediates which promises to be very interesting. Both teams are strong and the onlookers will be treated to a fast game if they have had any opposition at all.

Although nothing definite has been done about it an attempt has been made to have the Evansville first team come down at the same time and pull off a first team game the same evening that the intermediates have their contest. Practice has been carried on fairly regularly for two or three weeks and some very good material is showing up for this season's team. Captain Kopp has a great deal of confidence in the ability of the men now out for basket ball to make a championship team and is working them hard toward that end.

Hand ball is still very popular and draws several new recruits every week.

At the rink tonight the Cardinals play a Madison five which is practically the University second team. They have a very strong aggregation this year and are coming down here with the intent of treating the Janesville boys to a hearty drubbing. Games have been scheduled with Prospect and Evansville to come off next after the Wisconsin game after which the New York Nationals, the Chicago Turnkings, the Blue, the New Yorks, the New England Club, the Aero Club, all of Chicago, the Wisconsin Cardinals and the Wisconsin Prospects all have games here with the rink team. Some of these teams are very strong and a number of hard and fast games are expected during the season. After they have finished this list the Cardinals are planning to play Company P at Portage and the Cardinals at Monroe. All of the local boys are in good condition and with the exception of Hemming who began this season, are old men who are used to working together, making a team which is fully as good as last year's team if not better.

In the howling tournament in the course of progress at present the Cardinals are an far ahead of the closest competitor that there is no doubt but that they will win the championship of the city in this first contest anyway. After Christmas the real tournament begins and this will decide who is the best team of the season.

Considerable doubt is shown in the ability of the Tourists to get away to play off their schedule which they had made in preparation for a trip through Iowa and it is not yet certain whether they can carry it out. Within the last week basket ball has been started in the High school and the team organized as far as possible. Regular practice has begun and while it would be hard to get a team to equal last year's aggregation there is a good deal of very excellent material in the school and a good schedule will soon be made for them.

LAKOTAS WILL PLAY
CARDINALS TONIGHT

Hard Game is Scheduled For Tonight With University Second Team.

Tonight at 9 o'clock the Lakota Cardinals will meet the University of Wisconsin Cardinals at the Rink in what will probably be a hard and fast game. The Cardinals from Madison are composed of second team men who play games in the nearby cities when the first team has a game. These men have been practicing against the first team all season and are in good trim to give the local five a good hard brush. Last season the visitors won three out of the six games they played here and the Janesville boys are planning to keep them from repeating this performance if possible and will be prepared to give them the fight of their lives before they allow them to carry off the honors tonight.

Although in very good condition the Lakotas have played but one game this year and so have not had the advantage of the experience which their opponents have gained already this season. Murphy will not be able to play tonight as he will be in the Wisconsin-Holt game and it is not known who will take his place for sure as yet.

Cunningham will play right forward, with Green at left, while Hemming will do the jumping at center. Langdon will hold down his position at right guard and Booth will probably be placed at left guard. Should the boys win tonight they will have a good start for the season and will not have as much difficulty in beating the Wisconsin bunch in the following contents.

DATES ARE SET FOR SIX DAY CYCLE RACE

This Year's Event to be Held December 11 to 17—Riders From All Over the World to Participate.

New York, Dec. 9.—Cycle racing fans who for more than a decade have been wont to loaf and eat and sleep in Madison Square Garden while the weary six-day bike riders have sped around the steep banked saucer track are preparing for their annual treat—the last, by the way, that will be afforded them in the big building in Madison Square. The dates for this year's event are December 11 to 17, the long struggle starting as usual at one minute past the midnight hour tomorrow night.

The entire world from Australia to Europe has been ransacked this year to bring together absolutely every champion of note in the cycling game. Jimmy Moran of Boston, one of the greatest six-day racers in the world and one of the winners in last year's contest, will have for his partner Frank Kramer, the short-distance cycling champion of America. Eddie Root, who was Moran's team mate last year, will be paired with Freddie Hill of Boston. Joe Fogler who has two six-day victories to his credit, has teamed with Jackie Clark. The European entries are headed by Lorenz and Saldon, winners of the recent six-day meet in Berlin. Other contestants from abroad will include Laporte, Georget, Brocco and Vanhouwaert.

A radical change has been made in the financial arrangements for this year's race. Instead of riding for a fixed sum of prize money, as in all previous races here, the riders are to receive a percentage of the gate receipts. They have been clamoring for such an arrangement for several years and, as almost all other professional athletic sports are conducted along these lines, the management decided to give it a trial.

Life is a complex proposition. It is both independent and interdependent, because the meshes which entangle it are like a spider's web, touching the fabric of society at every point.

The man who prides himself on his independence of thought and action, frequently discovers that "no man liveth to himself," and whether he will or no, is forced to recognize the web which ensnares him, and of which he is a part.

The realm of capital, and the domain of labor, are confronted with this proposition at every turn of the wheel. One is helpless without the other, and the fact is slowly dawning upon both that mutual concessions are necessary to peace and harmony.

The labor world, just now, is passing through a period of humiliation, because it unwisely harbored within its organized ranks a class of criminals who have no right to the protection of this or any other land.

Corporate capital, on the other hand, is before the courts to determine the issue of what is legitimate competition, and thus it happens that both the industrial and labor world are in the throes of investigation, and more or less disturbed.

Between these two extremes is the broad highway where the current of life runs smooth because neither annoyed by a great surplus of wealth, nor handicapped by destitution.

In times of stress like the present, the fact is sometimes overlooked that "big business" represents but a handful of humanity while organized labor is but a fragment of the great army of contented toilers, who go through life unhampered by union regulations and who enjoy the freedom of thought and action which God intended for all His creatures.

But the author of the little poem, at the head of this article, had in mind the individual, the unit of society, and the sentiment so nicely expressed was for you and me—the individual toilers in the vineyard.

The brevity of life is a thing which rarely troubles us through the formative period, or through the active years when the days are all too short to accomplish the task in hand.

The boy, chafing under the restraints of home and school, longs for the years to hurry by, and anticipates with pleasure the coming of manhood and freedom.

The girl, who finds the monotony of home life, dreams of the future, when she will provide for her own home, and the old clock of time moves so slow that she would gladly blot out the intervening years and escape from imaginary bondage.

A family of three children were presented with three little chicks, just as they burst from their shells, deserted by their mother. They brought them home in a basket, wrapped up in flannel, and much to their surprise they lived and grew, until today it is difficult to realize that the scrawny, ungainly half-grown chickens are the same as the fluffy little chicks of a few weeks ago. They will be broilers before spring, and tough old birds before another Thanksgiving.

This is an object-lesson of the development and brevity of life in the animal kingdom. Someone suggested a time ago, that it was wicked to kill game and fish, but Dr. Boston, who was present, offered this thought, which is out of the common.

"A violent death is natural and a mercy in this lower realm, for nothing is more far from or no sight more pathetic than helpless old age in a helpless domain."

The development of child life is not so rapid, but watched from the rear end of the procession, the changes are about as radical, for time slips away so fast that the new generation comes to the front without notice, and the children of yesterday, are the men and women of today.

There was organized in Chicago, the other day, what is known as the "forty-five year club." One of the founders was a man of forty-five, out of work and unable to find employment, because he was too old. That tells a story of conditions, in this progressive age, which every boy can well afford to study.

The boy becomes a man legally at twenty-one, but if he finds an avocation to which he is adapted, and where success is likely to crown of fort by the time he is twenty-five, he is more fortunate than the average.

If the new age limit remains in force, and it will, it means that twenty years of activity must make his services indispensable, as an employee, or through thrift and economy he must acquire a competency shortly after he has passed middle life.

The skilled workman, who becomes expert in the industrial world, fares better than the men who are down and out in commercial life, for the demand in business is for young blood, and the man forced to retire on the shady side of life, finds it difficult to secure work at boys' wages.

Twenty-five years of childhood, youth and preparation for the journey, twenty-five more of activity, which determine destiny, and another twenty-five to round out the life, is the program at its best.

During every stage of the pilgrimage from the age of helplessness, on through the years to the golden sunset, we are more or less dependent, and when this fact is fully recognized the heart responds, and mutual helpfulness results.

The heaven of the future, to which so many people aspire, and for which so much preparation is made, will be a disappointment unless we discover it in the here and now.

The pearly gates, the golden streets and the seraphic wings, are pictures of imagery brought within the range of human comprehension to cheer and encourage the wayfarer, but the rugged highway of life is destitute of poetry, unless we put into it the song of gladness and good cheer which brings melody to the heart and drives the fear away. "No man liveth to himself."

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

THE SCIENTISTS. The o. scientists, those good old souls, are worrying once more. They're making new discoveries of microbes by the score.

They've lately been examining the thousand-dollar bills. Which move around from hand to hand and rest in many tills. They say that all the bills of that denomination reek With deadly germs of which they are almost afraid to speak. They claim the man who handles one is mostly apt to die. And many millions may be killed, they tell us with a sigh.

The scientists have scared us stiff quite frequently of late, but this time they have got in wrong. We cannot help but state

That most of us will never have the slightest fear or quail, in spite of this discovery, we'll nearly all stay calm.

They've started some weird theories and pulled some funny stunts. But on this thousand-dollar stuff, they've fallen down, for once. Of course the bills may have the microbes exactly as they say, but they will never kill any of our family that way.

AN OFFER DECLINED.

We have received recently from a gentleman in El Paso, several letters. We are quite positive that he is a gentleman and a perfect gentleman at that, because he has offered to make us rich beyond the dreams of avarice. Evidently, the reader may have guessed that the gentleman is in the silver mine business. He says if we would him our surplus resources he will, within a day or two, make us rich as Rockefeller.

This seems like a fair offer inasmuch as our available resources at the present time consist of two Confederate one dollar bills, a plugged quarter, a brass key ring, two street car tickets and a tin match safe. But, still, we hesitate to invest even this insignificant amount for, when we consider what wealth has done to Rockefeller, we are not quite certain that we want to be rich.

Without fear of being called selfish, we will state that we prefer to keep our own hair and an internal organism that can digest such delicacies as corn beef and cabbage, pork and beans or codfish. Besides, we don't like to play golf. Of course a silver mine is a nice thing to have about the place, but we feel that we must decline the gentleman's offer. Wealth has its drawbacks and we have all the drawbacks we need now without adding another. Furthermore, if there is no all-fired much money in that silver mine, we would suggest that the gentleman buy it himself.

We have entered into several get-rich-quick schemes in our time and have purchased green goods, silver plating outfits, magic lanterns, glass cutters, wall paper cleaners and furniture polish recipes, but we have never touched a silver mine for there is such a thing as getting rich too quick. If the promoter will excuse us, we will endeavor to remain poor and as honest as possible under the circumstances.

THESE OUGHT TO MAKE ANANIAS JEALOUS. "I never notice the weather. Hot or cold, it is all the same to me."

"My little boy Willie says the cutest and most humorous things. They really ought to be published."

"My daughter has had fourteen chances to get married this year, but she is waiting for the right man to come along."

"I like one part of the turkey just as well as another."

REINCARNATION.

(News dispatches state that a Kansas woman, who is a firm believer in reincarnation, announces that in the previous existence she was an alley cat.)

I don't know what I used to be or just what I am now. But this reincarnation talk appeals to me somehow.

When Christmas rolls around each year and my expense I note it seems that in the distant past I must have been a goat.

When I am dodging touring cars to get across the street. And bounding, leaping here and there upon elastic feet.

It often has appeared to me, perhaps it has to you, That in the other life I was a jumping kangaroo.

When travelling around the state in local option towns. Where 'em the soda fountain which is not with frigid frowns.

When for a whole week at a stretch I feel that in the other life I was a camel sure.

I sometimes think I used to swing from trees and wear a tail. And chatter language similar, if present signs don't fail.

There are some indications that cling fast. 'Tis plain to see. It's still quite possible to make a monkey out of me.

Now Is the Opportune Time

Last week one of my lady patients said to me:

"Dr. Richards, I want just the nicest set of teeth you can make me."

"This is the next man who wants to, and I long have wanted them."

What a thoughtful one on the part of the donor.

A set of teeth is said to prolong the life on the average about five years.

Who is the next man who wants to, really do a benefit to his faithful wife, mother, or sister?

I can make them all complete in less than a week's time.

MEN'S READING ROOM WAS OPENED TODAY

Prof. Paul Neystrom Compliments Library Board on Excellent Quarters and Equipment Provided.

Today at noon the reading room for men, which has been established in the large south room in the Carnegie library basement was opened to the public for the first time. Beginning today the room will be open every week-day from noon until nine o'clock p. m. and after January 1 on Sunday afternoon from two to six o'clock. The suggestion that the reading room be open for a few hours on Sunday came from Professor Paul Neystrom, who addressed the library board yesterday afternoon and the board decided to act upon it just as soon as was possible.

Prof. Neystrom instead of delivering a popular talk on general library matters, addressed his remarks directly to the library board and confined them closely to the subject of reading rooms for men. He complimented the board on the excellent quarters which they had provided for this purpose and the manner in which it had been equipped, and told of what was being accomplished by other cities in the state by efforts of the same nature. Men's reading rooms generally have been well patronized and have reached a class which hitherto have not availed themselves of library privileges.

The library board was very much interested in the talk of Prof. Neystrom and will try to secure him for a talk on the same subject at the meeting of the State Association of Librarians to be held in this city in February.

Those who have taken upon themselves the establishment of the men's reading room wish to make it plain that the room is open to all men regardless of occupation or position. Smoking will be allowed and maintained, and chairs and cushions have been provided for the use of those who wish to smoke. Ventilation apparatus has been furnished which will prevent the air from becoming foul and smoke laden. Two checker boards have been added to the equipment of the room. In addition to the magazines and papers supplied by the library, two magazine subscriptions and back numbers of magazines have been donated by interested friends.

The room entrance to the men's reading room will be through the front entrance of the library. Signs have been posted in prominent places there showing the way to the room. It is not necessary to pass through the main reading room to reach it. The story hour conducted at the library every Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock by Miss Agnes Buckmaster, is very popular with the children. This morning the room was filled with them. Miss Buckmaster usually tells them two or three fairy stories and a legend. She aims to have the children come by grades so that she can suit the stories to their ages and development, but they attend in all ages and sizes.

UNIVERSITY CLUBS GAVE FINE CONCERT

University Glee and Mandolin Clubs Gave Excellent Program to Small Audience Last Night.

From the opening to the closing melody the program given by the University of Wisconsin Glee and Mandolin Clubs at the Myra Theater last evening was pleasing in every way and drew a deserved amount of applause from a miserably small audience.

The entire program reflected credit on the leaders of both clubs as well as on each individual participant. The voices composing the Glee Club blended most perfectly and every number was well received by the audience. Mr. Treu's vocal solo was well rendered, his tender voice being remarkably clear and delightful. Mr. Pierce also gave several solo selections which were well received by the audience. Mr. Treu's vocal solo in the finale "The Selections of the Mandolin Club, some of which were very difficult, were played with an expression and exactness which indicated careful training and practice. The numbers given by the joint clubs proved especially acceptable, and the "Hill Wisconsin" at the close of the first part deserves special mention.

The entire program was well-balanced, and as follows:

Opening Melody.....Arr. by Stohart

"BEST ON EARTH"

This is the verdict of R. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife, "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly, and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once, and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." COUNT J.H. VON BERNSTORFF

KAISER'S FAVORITE.

Washington, D. C.—Count J. H. von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to Washington is again flourishing prominently as the Kaiser's favorite candidate for the post of secretary of state for foreign affairs now held by Herr von Kiderles-Vachser.

"Bernstorff" remarked the Kaiser recently, "must have become a 'butter' by watching American hustlers. I want a hustler in Berlin to manage my foreign policy."

Count von Bernstorff has attracted considerable attention recently through his advocacy of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Germany similar to that proposed between Canada and the United States this summer.

Problem in Anatomy.

"I wonder if these mount writers know how much a leg of lamb costs," said a lady the other day, as she rode for the fifth time a mount in a newspaper having that part of the young sheep as the meat for dinner. "It is all very well to get a leg of lamb if you have a large family," she said, "and can pay the price, but for a small family a shoulder of lamb is much better."

Riches and Arrogance.

Nothing is more hateful to a poor man than the proud arrogance of the rich—but let the poor man become rich and he runs at once into the vice against which he so feebly declaimed. There are strange contradictions in human character.—Richard Cumberland.

Immense Asparagus Bed.

There is an asparagus bed covering 20 acres in California.

Increase Your Income 50%

Your neighbors are buying municipal bonds of this bank because they more than double the interest paid by savings banks. They buy of this bank because it sells only bonds in which it has invested its own money and because the bank can afford to buy and sell only the safest of securities.

Prosperity and Adversity.
If we do not suffer ourselves to be transported by prosperity, neither shall we be reduced by adversity. Our souls will be proof against the dangers of both these states; and, having explored our strength, we shall be sure of it; for, in the midst of felicity, we shall have tried how we can bear misfortune.—Lord Bellinghroke.

No Fear Now.
No need to fear Japan. An old trust has begun to work over there, and now the nation never will have any money.—Detroit News.

Do Something Worth While.
You will find plenty of people eager to help you enjoy life; but you will only find happiness in being able to do something worth while, alone and unaided. If, in the doing of it, you can help others, so much the better.—James Barnes, "The Clutch of Circumstance."

Out of His Depth.
Two men were discussing the trouble in India, and each had a deal to say about his notion of Hindu character. "They're such a hellish set of people," said one. "Indeed!" exclaimed the other, in surprise. "I was always under the impression that they were very spare men."

Agreed with the Lecturer.
During a lecture at one of the leading colleges on the subject of "Ventilation and Architecture," the temperature of the room rose to a very high pitch. "And now we will turn to Greece," said the lecturer. "So we will," said one of the audience, wiping his brow, "unless you open some of the windows."

THIS EVENING WILL END DEMONSTRATION

Many Women and a Good Sprinkling of Men Present at All the Lessons Given by Mrs. Marshment.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN

OF PAPER BAG COOKERY UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE GAZETTE IN THE LESLIE TREAT BUILDING.

This evening at seven-thirty the last of the series of free demonstrations in paper bag cookery held under the auspices of the Gazette, will be given at the Leslie Treat building on South Main street. Mrs. Marshment, who has demonstrated the usefulness of the paper bags in house-hold affairs, will give the same lesson that she did this afternoon so that those who could not be present then can not miss anything.

Paper bag cookery has been so much discussed all over the country for several months past and so much interest evinced by the readers of the Gazette in the new economical cooking device, the Gazette secured the services of Mrs. Marshment so that the matter might be thoroughly investigated by the readers of the paper. While it has been at considerable expense these demonstrations have been conducted, the Gazette feels well repaid by the interest shown by those attending.

It has been the aim of this paper to aid in the economical solution of household problems. To help in reducing the cost of living to a minimum, if possible, and if the demonstrations, which close this evening, have been able to aid in this work it has been money well expended. Mrs. Marshment is a most able demonstrator and her lessons will be remembered by all who listened to her interesting talks.

It will perhaps be interesting to know that the Gazette is the first newspaper in the country to offer its readers free demonstrations in paper bag cookery. Others have published articles on the method used, but it remained for the Gazette to be the first newspaper to give the actual demonstration without a cent of expense to its readers.

This afternoon's lecture was most interesting and the lecture hall was crowded to the very doors by interested men and women. The following is the menu prepared and the recipes used:

The following are today's recipes.

Meat Cutlets.
Trim and season the cutlets, dust with pepper and salt, place in a greased bag and bake about 15 minutes.

Potatoes Maitre d'Hotel.
Cut up 6 cold boiled potatoes, place in a well buttered bag, add 1-2 glass of milk, salt and pepper, 1 oz of butter and a little chopped parsley, cook 15 minutes.

Roast Chicken.
Stuff in the usual way, cover the breast with butter or dripping or better stuff in a piece of salt pork over it. Place in a bag set on the broiler, allow 25 minutes for a spring, 35 to 45 minutes for older according to size.

Green Peas.
Drain the liquor nearly all off a can of peas, season with butter, pepper and salt, place in a bag, seal, set in the oven for 10 or 15 minutes.

Butter Rolls.
2 cups scalded milk, 1-4 cup butter, 2 teaspoons sugar, and 1 teaspoon of salt, 1-2 cake of yeast dissolved in lukewarm water, flour.

Add the butter, sugar and salt to the milk when lukewarm and the yeast then about 3-4 cups flour, but rise until light, then add enough flour to make a soft dough. Let rise again then place on a molding board and roll into a sheet 3-4 inch thick, with a sharp knife cut into pieces 2-3 inches long and 1 inch wide, place close together in a greased bag, let rise, bake in a brisk oven 15 minutes.

Macaroni and Cheese.
Boil macaroni in rapid boiling salted water until tender, blanch in cold water so it will not stick. Mix with 1 cup of strained tomatoes a liberal supply of grated cheese a pinch of red pepper, or chopped green pepper, place in a well greased bag and cook about 20 minutes.

Sponge Cake.
Beat the yolks of 4 eggs until thick and creamy, add 1 scant cup of sugar, beat again, add 2 tablespoons of cold water, 1 scant cup of flour, 1-2 table-spoons corn starch, 1 level teaspoon baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the 4 eggs and fold in, bake in a moderate oven in a well greased bag 35 or 40 minutes.

The Baffling Language.
English is the only form of human speech of which it can be said that it is not sufficient to know it in order to be able to use it. The Frenchman in England will find it better to speak in French. The Englishman prefers to try his French rather than to listen at your clumsy attempts at English. If any language has to be murdered, he would rather it be that of somebody else.—Paris Opinion.

The Myriads.
The Myrian province formed a short-lived government, being instituted by Napoleon in 1809, from various territories taken from Austria, north and east of the Adriatic. The government was abolished in 1814-15. The ancient Myrians are now represented by the Albanians, which fact doubtless gave the little kingdom its title.

The Philosopher of Folly.
"I never sit down," says the Philosopher of Folly, "to contemplate the uncertainties of life. It keeps me busy enough keeping track of the mere things."

Substitute for Sunlight.
Atmospheric electricity is believed to encourage plant life in the arctic regions, where there is but little sunlight.

A Schemer.
"I notice a peculiar thing about your hotel," said the boarder. "In all your guest rooms you have two very narrow windows, when one bigger one would do as well. I don't see the economy of such construction." "You don't see," chuckled the landlord. "Well, if you'll linger awhile you'll see that there ain't no trunk made that can be passed out through them windows."

Death by Lightning.
The supreme deity in the Greek and Roman religions, Zeus or Jupiter, was supposed to be the manipulator of the lightning, and the person struck down by one of the fiery bolts was especially distinguished, inasmuch as he had been felled directly by the king of the gods. The identity of the killer was reflected upon the killed. In addition to this, the opinion was quite universal that the bodies of those struck by lightning were incorruptible.—New York American.

Feeling with Idioms.
A foreigner, meeting an American friend, said to him, "How are you?" The friend replied, "Out of sight." The man considered this very clever, and decided to use the expression on the next occasion. Shortly after he was met by a friend, who asked, "How are you?" With visible pride he answered, "You don't see me."

South Carolina Cure for Fleas.

Go to the woods, cut a medium-sized sapling, peel the bark off, and lay the sapling where the fleas abound—in hog bed or stable. The fleas will jump on the white wood and be so busy with the sap or moisture that the sapling can be taken up, carried away, and dropped with its full passenger list of fleas. The operation may be repeated until all the fleas are carried off. That is the plan of a great express brother in black.—Barrowell (S. C.) People.

English Dress for Indians.

It seems not improbable that the dress adopted by educated India, which is more or less of the western type, will also be adopted by the people at large in the future. The fondness of the orientals for bright colors may give rise to gorgeous neckties and gold-laced collars.—Hindustan Review, Allahabad.

Advice for the Lovelorn.

When a girl begins to talk a great deal about some other man it is an excellent time to propose to her.

Health.

Bad as conditions are to-day, great progress has been made during the last 20 years. People are growing more careful as to what they eat and drink. There is no city that is not bestirring itself to improve its water supply and its system of sanitation. The demand for more fresh air is almost a fact in progressive communities.

Land of Commercial Industry.

The traveler through Saxony is rarely out of sight of a factory chimney. In probably no other land are industrial establishments so numerous in proportion to the area. The present number is 24,707, an increase of 1,755 over the preceding year. The number of operatives is 685,319, an increase of 41,235 in the course of a year.

Quill Pen Long in Use.

The value of the quill was discovered at an early date in the history of civilization, and its use spread from the east over Europe and then to the new world.

Women's Settlements.

Many women are living in settlements in different parts of London, working on quietly and steadily day by day, seeking no glory or notoriety for their work, finding their happiness in humble service, ready to help where their help is needed.—Nineteenth Century.

At The Theatre

HOWE'S TRAVEL FESTIVAL. Chicago appearance of his company and his success was the talk of the town.

Thomas P. Haskins, correspondent of the New York Telegraph, a leading journal of things theatrical, wired his paper the following from Chicago on July 22:

"Lyman H. Howe closes his most auspicious and profitable season at the Garrick theatre tonight although he will stay on this side of the continent for many weeks."

SIG. FRANCESCO CREATORE.

Myers Theater, Sunday, Dec. 10, Matinee and Night.

"In connection with Mr. Howe's departure, proved to be the most successful amusement in Chicago the past summer. The entertainment was booked for a 100 times run and the first week was a record in receipts. This did not change the traveler's policy although it was the first ply. "I remember very well when I came to Chicago and asked some of the managers to let me put my attractions into their theatres!"

"They looked at me as if I was a will appear here after an absence of gave me the 'mix' sign, as George Cohen would put it. Now I've been packing them in the Garrick and turning them away every time I put King George's photo in the lobby."

"And now's the time for me to leave. Next time I come back they'll be shoving theatres in front of me as fast I won't be able to walk along State street for fear of falling over a footlight."

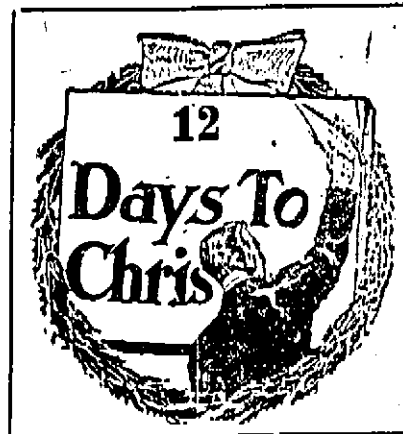

CREATORE'S BAND.

Manager Myers has arranged for high-class band concerts at the Myers theatre, matinee and night, Sunday, Dec. 10, when Sig. Francesco Creatore with his famous Banda Verdi will appear here after an absence of several months. For nearly a year past Sig. Creatore and his band have been appearing continuously in Milwaukee by many months the longest engagement ever played in that city by a similar organization. Creatore has started on a transcontinental tour with what he considers the best band ever under his direction. In speaking of one of Creatore's numerous concerts in New York, the New York Telegram finds occasion to remark:

"It aroused the audience to a pitch of enthusiasm seldom if ever seen in a New York theatre, and recalled in some measure the scenes enacted in the great music centers of the world where the entire populace are lovers of music and are giving to acclaim to their well beloved orchestras. It is a peculiar fact that this band possesses in a remarkable degree an assertive quality that places it at once 'en rapport' with its audience and as the program proceeds the applause increases in volume until a climax is reached that becomes an ovation and this was the case last night. Every number on the program was encircled and doubly encircled and the audience was enraptured. This band is beyond any question one of the best and foremost musical organizations of the time—a factor in musical education and a model for all others."

HEART AND HOME TALKS BY BARBARA BOYD

The Christmas Gifts in the Shops.

It would seem as if by simply walking through the shops, one could find suggestions sufficient for every one on the gift list. And yet often we come back from our quest, without a single gift definitely decided upon. Nothing has seemed to fit. It either doesn't suit the person, or else it is beyond the limits of our purse. And so we gaze with despair at our lengthening list and the shortening number of shopping days.

Have you thought of a reading glass for grandfather or grandmother? It is a great help for eyes that are growing dim, for reading newspapers and other literature where the print is smaller or less clear than in books and magazines.

Wouldn't the friend who has a pet dog or cat which she permits in her room like one of the beautiful baskets for pet animals that are to be found in the shops? Some of these are quite handsome affairs lined with brocade and trimmed with braid or ribbon.

The man who is fastidious about his little belongings might delight in one of the very thin, gold-plated pen-knives for his vest pocket. They are handsome and without equal.

If the person who is neurotic has electricity in her room, send her an electric warming pad. Many prefer it to a hot water bottle. The traveler will appreciate a folding umbrella which will go into a suitcase. If off on a trip, an umbrella must be taken, and yet it is quite a nuisance to carry it all the time.

For the business girl are thin flexible rubber leggings, with scarcely any appreciable weight, and which fit snugly as a stocking. They keep the limbs perfectly dry and are not heavy or cumbersome.

A small flat pillow that can be rolled or doubled in any conceivable fashion is most helpful to an invalid. This, with several dainty cases, makes a welcome gift.

A subscription to a good magazine, or season ticket to the opera or a series of concerts are gifts sure to delight those whose tastes run in this direction.

The person who owns a Victrola or a talking machine of any kind would probably appreciate some of the fine rolls. Especially fine selections for player-pianos, too, would no doubt be welcome by the owners of such instruments.

If a friend contemplates going abroad in the near future, a book upon some of the countries he intends visiting will be enjoyable. Anything, too, that has to do with a friend's hobby is sure to be welcome. If some boy of your acquaintance is rickling up a wireless on the roof, send him something for its equipment, or one of the latest books on electricity. A half hour in a photographic department will suggest many gifts for a camera fiend. In fact, if a friend has a hobby, the Christmas gift question is easily settled.

A flower lover will appreciate not only plants, and books upon the care and culture of plants, but also artistic flower-holders. One scarcely ever has enough pretty flower vases.

A lonely woman might like a canary. But don't send a parrot if you have any regard for the neighbors.

The hospitable woman would no doubt rejoice to receive a pretty guest-set for her spare room, if she hasn't one already—a tray, water pitcher, glass, candlestick.

But it doesn't seem difficult to think of Christmas gifts, if one will think of the friend first and of his or her predominating characteristics and then, with this in mind, seek the shops and the wealth of articles they offer.

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

JAMES R. SMITH was killed yesterday afternoon in an automobile accident. The accident happened when Mr. Smith turned suddenly to avoid a pedestrian, who had stepped directly in front of the machine. The automobile crashed into a telephone pole and Mr. Smith was instantly killed. Mr. Smith has a reputation as a very careful driver and witnesses say he was driving very slowly at the time of the accident.

One hears much all over the country nowadays about reckless driving. There are two sides to every question. What about "reckless walking?"

The above paragraph which I clipped from a morning paper, suggests the following hints for pedestrians: In crossing a street, always look straight ahead, up at the sky or down at your feet, but never by any chance to the right or left.

If you are trundling a baby carriage, always select a very crowded crossing to cross upon. Stand a moment or two upon the crossing, as if deliberating whether to embark or not, while all the drivers and chauffeurs are watching you anxiously, and then, with the utmost deliberation you are capable of, and the most nonchalant indifference to your surroundings, make the passage.

If you meet an acquaintance in the middle of the road by all means stop right there and have a quiet little friendly chat with him or her. Under no circumstances bother to step up to the sidewalk.

If you step out of a trolley car never look about you, but assuming that the street must, of course, be perfectly cleared in honor of your arrival, start at once to the sidewalk.

When waiting for a trolley car, it is always preferable to stand squarely in the middle of the road. You might miss it if you waited on the sidewalk.

If you are a small boy, whenever you see an automobile coming, run across the road in front of it to see just how close you can come to being run over, without quite doing it. If you miscalculate by any chance you will have a fine revenge on the automobilist, as your parents can collect damages from him and he may even be held for manslaughter.

Whoever and whatever you are, regard all automobiles and drivers as your natural enemies, and in so far as you can without too much peril to your own skin, get in their way and hinder and annoy them.

I have outlined these few suggestions "hints" for pedestrians. I am sorry, I am not the wise is sufficient; a hint to most pedestrians is sufficient.

TO TRY is better than the thing you try for. To hope is better than the height attained. To love is greater than the love you wish for. To work is nobler than the object gained. To wrestle with the angels—this avails. Though the motive for the wrestling fails.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

In kitchens heated with hot air from a furnace, a very nice device was noticed in a modern house: A small table with a lower shelf made of heavy wire was used over the register when plates and all dishes for serving could be kept warm. A radiator in a kitchen may be used in the same way if a shelf of tin or zinc is made to hold the dishes.

A leak in a wash boiler may be stopped temporarily by a little corn meal dropped into the boiler over the hole and the corn meal will swell and fill the hole. Flour and water made into a stiff dough will often do as well. A penny is a good paint remover when paint has been dried on the windows.

Knives that have pearl or ivory handles should never be put into hot water.

A good way to do to have a spoon for measuring quickly at hand is to leave a cheap teaspoon in the soda, baking powder and cream of tartar cans. Then they are always there for use.

Pound and half-pound baking powder cans are most convenient for steaming puddings or for molding and packing away frozen dessert that does not need stirring.

Vegetables may be kept fresh and crisp for months if packed in sand or earth in a box. Carrots, beets, turnips and winter radishes are as fresh as when dug.

Dampen the brush of the carpet sweeper and there will be more dirt in the sweeper and less left on the floor.

Glazed Dressing for Fruit.—Roll together sugar and water until quite a thick syrup is formed. When cool pour over any combination of fresh fruit. With a little chopped fresh coconut or shredded almonds a diet of unbroken may be served.

Corn Pudding.—To a can of corn add a half cup of melted butter, a tablespoonful of flour, a cup of milk and two eggs well beaten. Season with plenty of salt and pepper and bake a half an hour.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Casserole Cookery. The Bean Pot Idea.—Use of Ramekins.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

Kitchen work is yet held as but another name for drudgery, and every woman ought to be willing to try new methods, forget some things that her mother and grandmother did and above all, not be too anxious to avoid kitchen problems.

To serve foods in the dishes in which they are cooked is not only a saving of labor but it improves the food that is otherwise sure to lose something with every transfer from dish to dish. Hot things grow cool, puff, light foods fall and tender ones break apart by being handled. Our ancestors who carried the bean pot and the pudding pan directly from the fire over to their plate found a modern help in this direction is the family of casseroles and their near relatives the ramekins.

The casserole is now made so attractive that it is carried direct to the table, placed in its copper, silver or metal plated frame that keeps it from injuring the table and makes it convenient to handle while hot. This is but one little way in which the modern kitchen loses its disagreeable features.

In every kitchen there ought to be two or three casseroles, or earthenware baking dishes, with covers of the same ware and large enough to hold sufficient to serve a family. Casseroles without handles are preferred. Covered casseroles cost from thirty-five cents to two and a half dollars or more for those with frames for holding them. These covered dishes are for foods that need long and slow cooking, or moderate heat.

The uncovered dishes or large ramekins are also sufficiently decorative to be used on the table and are handy for foods to be browned on top. The small uncovered dishes without covers or handles, are for cooking and serving individual portions. Foods adapted to either size of ramekins include everything to be cooked in gratin, creamed oysters, chicken or fish and eggs in various styles.

It is believed by some cooks that the covered, earthenware is better for baking beans than the tin-lined bean pot, but this idea comes from the West and not from that section where the bean pot is called into weekly service.

To cook a chicken or young fowl in a casserole, wipe it over with a wet cloth and cut in pieces for serving. If very fat, remove all that is possible. Dust with salt and pepper, then put in a casserole, spreading soft butter over each piece and dredging generously with flour. Add one cup of boiling water and set in a moderate oven. Bake until the chicken is tender, then add one cup of thin cream and cook ten minutes longer. Serve in the same dish and also have baked potatoes and canned peas drained and heated through but not cooked longer.

Creamed celery is an example of foods that are well cooked and served in a large ramekin. Clean celery stalks well and cut into half-inch lengths. Blanche until tender in water to cover. Make two cups of white sauce for two and a half cups of cooked celery using milk or the water in which the celery was cooked with some cream added. Season the sauce and butter the ramekin. Put in a little celery with finely grated dry cheese and Parmesan is the best; then spread over a layer of the cooked celery. Add another layer of sauce, cheese and celery, then sauce and cheese to finish. Cover with a cup of chicken crumbs mixed with one-third cup of melted butter and place in the oven until the crumbs are brown.

Scalloped bananas in ramekins are acceptable. Have four bananas; peel and slice. Butter the small ramekins and put one banana in each. Dust with salt and a trifle of pepper, and then put a bit of butter. Cover with buttered crumbs and pour a spoonful of thin cream into each dish. Set in the oven with a moist heat over the top for twenty minutes, then uncover and brown. The time for cooking must be governed by the heat and the fruit may become soft in less time.

Carried trips, an casserole, is a pudding. Cook one onion, sliced thin in two roundish tablespoons of butter until it is yellow. Add two roundish tablespoons of flour and one half level teaspoon of salt, two level tablespoons of curry powder and a few grains of paprika. When smooth add one and one-half cups of milk, and when the sauce boils, strain it over one pound of tripe cut in small squares and laid in a casserole. Cover and set in the oven for half an hour. The tripe should have been cooked in water until tender before it is used in the curry. This is sometimes done before it is bought, but if it appears tough, cook it over as long as needed to make it tender.

COLORING MATTER IN GREEN PEAS.

It was recently demonstrated at an exposition in New York that enough coloring matter is contained in a can of green peas to dye a handkerchief a deep copper color. It is not illegal to use certain dyeing and preserving materials in canned foods if they are labeled as the law requires. Appeal to the eye and sense of taste are not to be ignored, but so long as people prefer denatured flour and denatured rice because they look prettier and bright green canned goods because they look prettier, it is impossible to have good nutrition with good health. It should be possible to get unpolished rice anywhere cheaper than the polished, and it should be possible to buy entire wheat anywhere, but merchants can not afford to keep such choice foods because there is little demand for them, owing to the lack of such knowledge as is daily supplied in these hints. It would be easy now to form in this city a club who could purchase the best food for themselves at reduced prices or arrange with a grocer who would gladly keep such food if he knew of the demand.

FADS AND FASHIONS.

New York, Dec. 7.—There has been considerable uncertainty concerning the position of the waistline during the past few months. The dictators of fashion have seen fit to juggle with the waistline ever since last winter, moving it up and down at their whim and pleasure, until the women were completely bewildered. It was, and is now, by no means an unusual thing to find in the same exhibit of some famous creator of fashion costumes of which every one has the waistline at a different height.

During the last season the waistline was again slightly raised, and now word comes from Paris that the newest models show a lowered waistline, one only slightly above normal, which probably means that a long the waistline will again return to its natural position. The long, graceful lines we eagerly sought for by designers of clothes have rejoined in a vogue that has given them an opportunity to indulge their fancy to the utmost. With the return of the normal waistline will undoubtedly come the introduction of short trains on afternoon and evening gowns, for in no other way can that sweep of grace be obtained.

The accepted line of the waist this season is one and one-half inches above the normal in the back, gradually to one inch above in front. The most fashionable frocks will be made after that model, although in the evening gowns greater liberties will be taken with this portion of the frock.

Double-faced materials, both silks and woolsens, are much in vogue at the present time and will be much in evidence during the winter season. Top coats, polo and motor coats are all being made of reversible cloth. Soft neutral tones often have reverse sides in a brilliant shade of bright green or blue, orange or orange, which shows in collars and cuffs.

Smart coats are made up of dark polo cloth backed with white, the huge white collar and deep cuffs being chic and becoming if not exactly as serviceable as those of a darker hue. Checkered effects are smart as reversed sides to plain-toned wools. Often these coats are in fact reversible, making a pleasing and convenient change for the wearer. For instance, a dark blue blanket coat, on loose, wide legs, has as its reverse side a light blue-and-white plaid surface. During the day it is worn in the motor car and in the evening is turned inside out and worn over a dark gown to the cafe and theatre.

Light-weight double-faced cloths for coat suits. One attractive model is of dark blue serge backed by a narrow stripe in old blue and black. The hem of the skirt is turned up on the right side, thus giving the effect of a skirt in a like manner, but are faced within an inch of the edge with old blue satin.

Another trig suit is of tobacco brown anti-faded cloth faced with a small check in dark brown and moss green. Besides the "reversed" side, this shows touches of green satin-covered cords outlining the seams and simulating buttonholes which meet large fancy metal buttons in a row with a soft deep-toned yellow blue, with corse or the richer dahlia tints.

Other interesting combinations are shadings of violet and purple, stone gray with red, blue and dark green. In the satins and other silk stuffs the color schemes are even more complicated, a shot or changeable effect often backing a plain color. Black satin, showing a reversible side of rich purple, blue, yellow or red, is being employed for afternoon and evening gowns, the bright side being used in many clever ways as trimming. There are many varieties of grades of these materials in the market and there is no doubt that they will be worn a great deal during the winter.

Long coats of moleskin are a fad of the moment, and judging from the number of them worn must be so. They are lovely in color and texture and the heels are supplied with enough for graceful handling, but the fur is not so practical as some of the tougher furs and does not the permanent value of the more costly furs such as sable, chinchilla, broadtail, etc.

Fur coats showing two furs in combination are numerous, though usually developed in the less expensive pelts. Seal of the Hudson or French variety and moleskin in combination are popular and more effective than one would imagine before seeing them, the coloring being sombre but rich. Long straight scarfs and huge muffs made of alternating bands of these two furs are one of the fancies of the moment. Moleskin is often combined with ermine not only in small furs but in extremely elegant coats, the soft gray and white forming a most harmonious and charming color scheme.

The importance of lace in the scheme of present day fashions cannot be too strongly emphasized. Fluffs of lace have been placed on the lower edge of skirts under the new skirts, however. The straight silhouette, although decidedly removed from the hobble line of last season, must be adhered to and, therefore, the ruffles must be scant.

Many long sleeves show ruffles at the wrist. Fine laces are used for this, giving soft folds of white over the hand. Lace is used for jabots, collars, revers and collarettes on blouses. Wide and narrow bands and edgings are equally popular. Frills of black-and-white lace fall down the fronts of cloth frocks. They are in the majority of cases adjustable, and one dress, therefore, can show many little touches by the mere removal or replacing frill.

The use of lace on evening hats is decidedly noticeable. High, puffed crowns of all-over Valenciennes lace of coarse varieties, or of Irish lace in combination with Valenciennes are used on models that have lightness of weight and fresh colorings.

Thought for Today By MRS. ROBERT M. LAFOLLETTE

THE HABIT OF HEALTH.

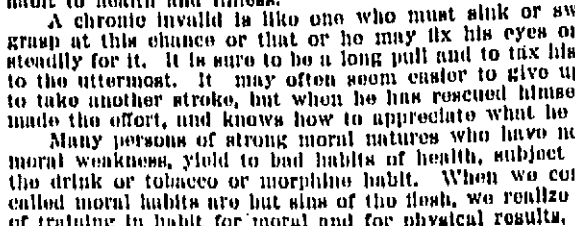

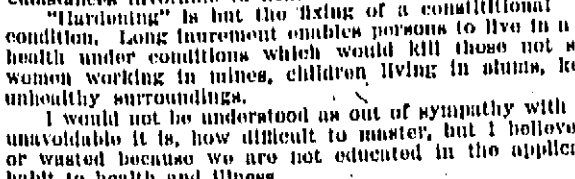

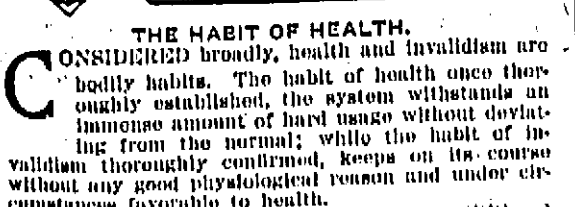

CONSIDERED broadly, health and invalidism are bodily habits. The habit of health once thoroughly established, the system withstands an immense amount of hard usage without deviating from the normal; while the habit of invalidism, thoroughly confirmed, keeps on its course without any good physiological reason and under circumstances favorable to health.

"Hardening" is but the fixing of a constitutional condition. Long treatment enables persons to live in a state of comparative health under conditions which would kill those not so trained. Men and women working in mines, children living in slums, keep well in spite of unhealthy surroundings.

I would not be understood as out of sympathy with illness. I know how it is, how difficult to master, but I believe many a life is lost or wasted because we are not educated in the application of the laws of habit to health and illness.

A chronic invalid is like one who must sink or swim. He may vainly grasp at this chance or that or he may fix his eyes on the shore and pull steadily for it. It is sure to be a long pull and to tax his faith and endurance to the uttermost. It may often seem easier to give up and go under than to take another stroke, but when he has rescued himself, he is thankful he made the effort, and knows how to appreciate what he has gained.

Many persons of strong moral natures who have no sympathy with any moral weakness, yield to bad habits of health, subject to the same laws as the drunk or tobacco or morphine habit. When we consider how many so-called moral habits are but sins of the flesh, we realize the close association of training in habit for moral and for physical results.

NEWS OF TEACHERS' TRAINING SCHOOL

Interesting Events of the Past Week at New Rock County Institution.

Miss Kate Crall and Miss Minnie Klingholz, teachers in the Shopley State graded school, were visitors at the school on Friday.

Miss Jacobson and the young ladies of the school, spent an enjoyable evening Friday in the Training school rooms, playing games and making candy.

Mr. Lowth is entertaining Principal Fred Christensen of the Manitowish Training school at his home.

Miss Ward of Koshkonong will enter the training school after the holidays.

Mr. Lowth spoke to the school Wednesday morning, on "How to Study."

All of the training school students remained in town Friday night so as to be present at the teachers' meeting at Saturday.

Division work is made much of in the training school and each student is supplied with a copy of the Academic.

Tests have been the order of the day this week, of the standings which are for the most part satisfactory.

The chief function of the training school is to prepare teachers for work in the rural schools. If we do this work well and we are doing it well, then shall we be rendering a distinctly valuable service to Rock County.

The teachers graduated from the school will go out and spread the gospel of educational light, so that ultimately the illumination will become general as the school grows and widens the scope of its influence.

We should like to get into communication with young women sixteen to twenty years of age who are intending to teach in country districts and who now have a good common school education. Write us, or better come and visit our school.

There is much talk in our day about the "new country life." If one will think about it there has been a tremendous change in the last quarter of a century, a material change which the younger generation can hardly appreciate.

But is there a corresponding spiritual and mental uplift to keep pace with the good things which have come in the way of improved machinery and means of communication and transportation? It is at least a question worth thinking about.

CLINTON

Clinton, Dec. 8.—Mrs. E. S. Duxstad was in Janesville yesterday.

Mrs. Emanuel Bradley, formerly of Clinton, died Thursday noon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. L. Bonnell, south of town, where she has made her home for several years.

The funeral will be held from the home Sunday at 1:30 p. m.

Edward Albert Nussbaum, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Nussbaum, has been very sick, caused, it is supposed, by the little fellow eating some indigestible matter which he picked up in the yard several days ago.

Mrs. Daniel Ames and children of Elgin, Ill., are visiting Mrs. Ames' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert White.

Mrs. C. W. Collier is visiting relatives at Malet, Ill., this week.

Mrs. Ferdinand Wobig, who has been very sick, is convalescing.

Oscar Duxstad's injured hand has nearly healed and while it is very sore and stiff he will soon regain the use of his hand again.

Spencer P. Reese is a little more than holding his own and his family and physician are greatly encouraged.

J. P. Kommerer is in Texas with an excursion of hunkers.

Miss Edith Turner, of Anderson, Indiana, is visiting her sister, Mrs. P. H. Woodard.

The Mystic Workers will have a meeting Tuesday evening of next week at the home of Mrs. W. R. Northway.

KOSHKONONG

Koshkonong, Dec. 7.—Miss Della Baethner returned last week from a visit with her sister at Juneau.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Robinson returned Saturday from Eau Claire where they visited her parents.

Mrs. Mabel Swift is entertaining a lady friend from Ft. Atkinson this week.

Jack Masterson is planning for a trip to England in January.

Miss Esther Shuman, entertained Miss Meta Elao of Milton and Miss Clara Ludolph of Janesville Thanksgiving day.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Miller spent Thanksgiving day with her sister in East Koshkonong.

Edward Kraus returned Monday from Deland, South Dakota, where he spent the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robinson spent Thanksgiving at Milton Junction with relatives.

John Dedrick, and men, have been doing carpenter work at Alf. Austin's.

Frank Harless and Robert Brown, of Rock Prairie called at P. Traynor's Wednesday and attended the stock sale on the Alf. Austin farm.

Mrs. D. Brown and son, Raymond, attended the Presbyterian church supper Tuesday evening in Janesville.

Herman Rupnow shredded corn for F. G. Baethner, Tuesday; the Heath boys for P. Sherman on the same day. Mr. and Mrs. D. Brown attended the Rehearsal dance in Janesville Wednesday evening.

Mrs. R. Miller entertained the deacons, Miss Fleming, from Milwaukee, last week; and Mrs. Herbert Robinson will entertain her this week.

The nurses' demonstration given by Miss Fleming for the mothers, at the Otter Creek church Friday evening was very interesting and brought out a good attendance.

Mother's were held at the church every evening last week and will continue this week.

There will be services Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and evening services at 7:30. Miss Fleming will speak at both services.

May Hill of Milton Junction brought a single load of boys, nineteen in all, to the church service here Tuesday evening.

On Monday morning while Leo Hoth was taking the last few gallons of gasoline from a fifty-gallon tank, a lighted cigar, which he held in his hand caused an explosion which carried the tank about forty feet into the air.

Mr. Hoth received a bad cut on the back of his hand, but no other damage was done.

Robert McKinley has charge of the three and lights at the church this week. Judging from the good work he has done, he is a good one.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Vogel entertained a number of their friends and neighbors at their home Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Richardson of Beloit visited their daughter, Mrs. R. Miller last week.

Miss Sadie McCulloch, teacher at Otter Creek school, walks to her home in Milton Junction every night, a distance of more than three miles, returning on the morning train.

Farmers have had a hard time the last month chopping out and hauling sugar beets. The weather has been worse this season than it has been for a number of years for this kind of work.

NEW GLARUS

New Glarus, Dec. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klawnsky are visiting with friends at Monroe.

Sol Stussky transacted business at Monticello on Wednesday.

Miss Mabel Lewis of Brookhead, was here this week. She took the place of Miss Ada Andrews at school teacher.

John Mohlman of Arlington, Wis., was here on a visit on Wednesday. He was the guest of C. Duxstad.

L. J. Fiel was a Monroe visitor on Thursday.

Yesterday occurred the wedding of Mr. John Zimmerman and Miss Katharine Zwiolof at the Swiss church parsonage. They left for a wedding trip to Algoma, Iowa.

Mrs. R. E. Bartlett spent yesterday at Monroe, visiting with relatives.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, Dec. 9.—The Klaxon Orchestra will be here Monday evening at the Opera House.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Burdette visited Friday with their daughter, Mrs. J. Pfister in Brookhead.

Mrs. B. Brunswold has been enjoying a visit from her mother of Albany.

Mrs. C. Niles of Evansville, is in the village with a line of Janesville fancy work, which she sells at reasonable prices.

Mrs. K. N. Grunwald attended the concert given at the Congregational church at Janesville, where her daughter, Miss Clara takes part in the choir.

W. Kreuger who has been suffering with a very sore eye is much better. Mr. and Mrs. Pankhurst spent Friday in Janesville at the home of J. P. Smiley, where Miss Mary Pankhurst is very low.

A little Diapieson makes your out-of-order stomach feel fine in five minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapieson.

If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapieson occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, and no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach.

A little Diapieson makes your out-of-order stomach feel fine in five minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapieson.

If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapieson occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, and no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach.

BY WALT MASON.

If no one ever told a lie, what would the pastor find to say when you and I cut loose and die, and he orates above our clay? As things are now the pastor spends in terms of praise, without reserve; he says, while he looks at the dead man had the finest character "His passing was a loss to all, the world is darker since he's gone; beloved in college, an ideal, he was a peach, so help me John! With weeping eyes and gnashing teeth he hands the eulogy, a large bouquet, but if all people told the truth, what would the pastor say? "The dead one was a friend in need, he cheered the widow and her child, in every thought and every deed, he showed a heart, clean, undivided, a figure grand and strong he stood, a beacon to the human race, ambitious to be doing good, to make the world a better place." Thus speaks the pastor, and in truth, he drives the mourners' grief away; but if all people told the truth, what would the worried pastor say?

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

By Howard L. Ramm.

WOMAN'S SPHERE.
As generally understood, woman's sphere is a condition of mental servitude in which she has been assigned by the brutality of man. It is bounded on the north by the nursery, on the south by the family wash, on the east by the pancake griddle, and on the west by the darning egg. Whenever a man marries a woman who shows a tendency to delicious dissipation by sitting with a sewing circle or drinking in the delights of the public library, he turns up at the breakfast table and emits a few soothing remarks about woman's sphere. A man will go to the club and play Kelly pool until he has to have the oxygen treatment between shots, but if his wife joins the mad-dancing throng at the moving picture show one night a week he will recall

What present for brother?

New Kinds of Dogs.
It is an astonishing phenomenon that 700 Pekingeses, Poms, Japanese and toy spaniels should be collected at a ladies' show when it is remembered many of these species were not even known in England less than 50 years ago. And now species continue to come. The flat-headed Austrian dachshunds and the huge Pyrenean watchdogs are both new and are both species which have the best qualities in a dog, fidelity and intelligence. London Spectator.

To Serve a Purpose.
Young Lady—Please show me your extreme style of hobble skirt.
Selling—For yourself?
Young Lady—No; for my chaperon.
Judge.

Speak Gently.
Speak gently! 'tis a little thing dropped in the heart's deep well; the drop, the joy, that it may bring eternally shall tell.—G. W. Langford

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Gazette, Dec. 9, 1871. Members of the ways and committee generally agree that the income tax should be abolished at the beginning of the next year.

The Kansas Pacific railroad, which has been blocked up by snow, is now clear from Kansas City to Cheyenne, and the Union Pacific mails are coming over it from the West.

At Oshkosh, Tuesday morning, the thermometer was twenty-four degrees below zero.

In Berlin, says the Journal, the young fellows treat their girls to vaccination the same as they would to a dish of tea or coffee, or a glass of soda.

The thermometer registered three degrees above zero this morning at three o'clock, and fifteen above at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The ice on the river is well patronized by skaters.

In consequence of the long continued drought many of our prairie farmers are compelled to deepen their wells to procure water.

Admiral Motz and Pense are investigating the charges of the Chicago Tribune against our firemen, and have already procured valuable testimony in favor of the men who have been so grossly libeled.

A union prayer meeting will be held in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association Sunday afternoon at three-thirty o'clock and on Monday evening at eight o'clock.

A government with twenty or thirty thousand troops at its command, that allows itself to be forced to commit such crimes as the killing of eight thoughtless students, ought not to exist for a day. We earnestly hope that the rebellion in Cuba will never cease until every Spaniard is driven from the island and a republic established.

NOT AN XMAS PRESENT.
If it isn't because they're unselfish and generous, why is it, pray, so many men are so often engaged in giving themselves dead away?

And another man.

Notes From Japan.

The Tokio municipality has decided to open labor exchanges throughout the city where employers can find help when needed. Mr. Juichi Soyoda, president of the Industrial Bank, Tokio, in a recent speech is quoted as saying that while Japan has been free from riots and disturbance, the future is not safe, and to head off trouble governmental steps have been taken to increase the food supply. Rice production is near its maximum, leaving barley as the next grain to rely on. He thinks potatoes may come into wider use and urges the development of mountain-raising and the encouragement of fisheries. The fish supply of late has been diminishing.

Touching Tenderness.

A tender parent has been discovered in New York. Having been warned that the milk he sold to others and fed to his own babe was slowly killing the latter, he promptly took an expensive bottled milk for the child, though he cheerfully continued to supply the infants of his poorer neighbors with the condemned stock.

Evil Bound to Spread.

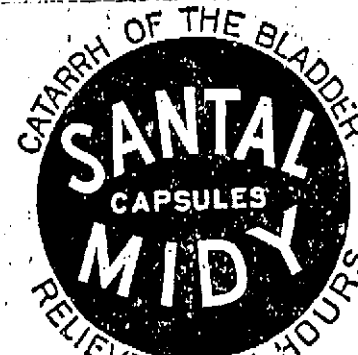

There is no sort of wrong deeds of which a man can bear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil that is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe. Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—George Eliot.

To Tempt the Fish.

It was always the custom of the Maori, the primitive inhabitants of New Zealand, to put the first fish that they caught back into the sea "with a prayer that it might tempt other fish to come and be caught."

Taking No Chances.

A woman in New Jersey who says she is Eve has been put in jail. Which speaks well for the cautiousness of the New Jersey men.

Uncle Eben on Spellbinding.

"Do difficulty 'bout some o' dese campaign speeches," said Uncle Eben, "is dat dey makes me so powerful en thusmatic dat I can't remember jes' what dese keminers was talkin' 'bout!"—Washington Star.

Food for All the World.

The ten trees of the world could, if calculated, provide food all the year round for the population of the globe. Brazil nuts grow in such profusion that thousands of tons of them are wasted every year.

Cured in His Own Home! Town.

Rudino, Wis. Jacob Ersen tells the way for his fellow townsmen to be cured of kidney and bladder trouble as he himself was cured. "For over 20 years I had kidney trouble and catarrh of the bladder. I read an advertisement of Foley Kidney Pills, got some and took them. Before taking them I was not able to work, but now I have commenced to work again and I am improving every day. The action of my bladder was frequent and painful and I lost a great deal of sleep at that account the first part of the night, but since taking Foley Kidney Pills all this pain and annoyance has ceased, my back no longer aches and I feel better in every way. I gladly recommend Foley Kidney Pills to all who have kidney trouble. Hader Drug Co."

IN ANOTHER KEY

The amateur artist was painting—sunset, red, with blue streaks and green dots.

The old rustic, at a respectful distance, was watching.

"Ah," said the artist, looking up suddenly, "perhaps to you, too, nature has opened her sky pictures page? Have you seen the lambent flame of dawn leaping across the livid east; the red-stained, sulphurous islets floating in the lake of fire in the west; the ragged clouds at midnight, black as a raven's wing, blotting out the shuddering moon?"

"No," replied the rustic shortly; "not since I give up drink."—The Sacred Heart Review.

Early Recollections.

It was a real, right down jolly old English wedding, yet down by the bottom of the breakfast table sat one pale and serious individual who, like Sir Arthur Sullivan's organist, was "wooly and ill at ease." He seemed miserably alone and unhappy in all that kindly company; wherefore the clergy best man sought him out, slapped him on the back and ultimately said, "Come, come, old man, cheer up. Have you kissed the bride?"

Deep came a sigh from his very boots as he spoke the answer that told far more than his meager words expressed: "Not lately, old man—not lately!"—Sheffield Telegraph.

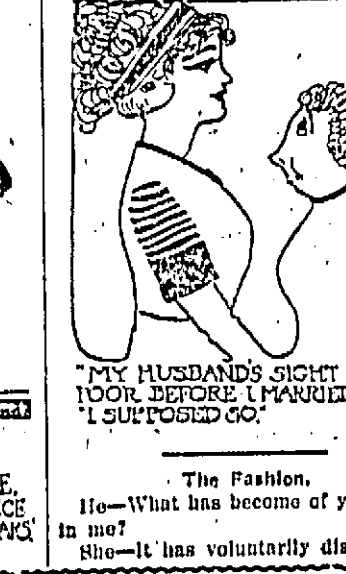

Not Consoling.

One of the boys had broken one of the school rules and no one would own up.

The teacher announced that he would thrash the whole class if some one did not tell him who had committed the offense.

All were silent, and he began with the first boy, and thrashed every one in the class until finally he reached the last one. Then he said: "Now, if you will tell me who did this I won't thrash you."

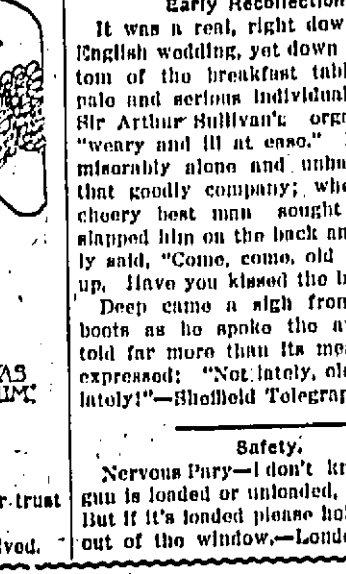

"All right, sir. I did it," was the reply.—Ideas.

WHEN the call came to move south, Chance laid it to the prairie floor.

"Nowadays, three minutes I see that yellow in the air, and the grass crackles up—crisp and ready under Siwash's toes, why, I don't stop to do any plowing or back-firing. Siwash and me got the call of the south quick, and we take the trail toward Yampa."

"Going to stop off at old man Nawn's place, as per usual?" inquired Bill mildly.

"Sure," said Chance.

"Going to bring a missus back with yer?" Still the tone was gentle.

Chance laughed and rubbed his fingers up through his thick, curly hair dubiously.

"She wouldn't like it 'way out here, would she, Bill? Even you and me find it lonely. I guess a woman would die."

"Nope." One of the brown puppies rolled nonchalantly over into the pan of milk, and Bill fished him out carefully and rolled him on the ground in tender, motherly fashion, to dry him off. "Women don't mind being heifers and plants and kids. They like to be the whole show and boss a place like this. They'd boss us something fierce if one ever did get a foothold here, Chance.

"Wouldn't it do us good?" protested Chance. "You and me, Bill, we're got-ting too set in our ways. We're getting like a couple of half-petrified polliwogs down here. If they'll only let us alone, I'm going to ride south to-morrow, and I'm going to stop off at old man Nawn's place and say 'howdy'."

It was a challenge to further argument, but Bill took it not up. He knew the saying was against him, as well as the memory of Madeline's tanned, dimpled face, with its quick smile and big, soft, dark eyes. So the next morning at daybreak Chance rode south, rode with his head held high to greet the dawn-light over his shoulder, and his hat brim turned low with a jaunty twist, as befitting a wooling cavalier.

Every spring, for six years back, he had taken the same route. It had constituted his spring run after the long, slow, snowbound winter back up in the foothills where the prairie breaks against their base like long, rolling waves.

Through the winter he and his partner would live quietly in the little rough shack that hugged the shelter of the shelving butto behind it. When a big storm was in the air, they would ride out with the dogs and drive the herds down into the gullies. It was the only exciting thing that ever happened in Chance's veins and he took the southern trail for relaxation.

He was whistling softly as he rode this time. It was getting on toward sunset before he checked Siwash and rested to take his bearings. They were on the crest of a creek bed. It was one of those meandering, dried-up affairs, with tangled masses of hip and a few scrawny young cottons and a few here and there along the slopes. The bleached, weather-bent skull of a steer lay half buried in the sun-baked earth midway down the slope; but it was not a mere skull that caused Siwash to droop his long neck and whinny restlessly.

"Not meaning to argue with you, Si," said Chance, "but I don't see a blame thing suspicious on this horizon."

The horse nosed at the long, dry grass tops, and suddenly Chance looked down, not at the creek bed, but at the deep, tangled mass of weeds where the land dipped to the slope, and he swung off the pony's back with a sharp exclamation. It was the body of a man.

"Si, you're the most sagacious and perspicacious animal on four legs in the State of South Dakota."

He turned the body over, and looked at the face. The eyes opened widely and stared back at him, dully at first, then with slow-gathering consciousness in their lifeless, flamed depths.

"Hallo, Chance," whispered the parched, blackened lips. "Hallo, Lucky Chance. Give me a drink."

Chance drew the bottle from his hip pocket and put it to the dry lips. The man drank thirstily. Chance laid him back on his heels, his square chin and neck pointing forward.

"Heard you and he had swung into partnership since he got thrown out of the reservation, Peto. Heard he and you were making quite a bit of money out of land speculation. Indian mortgages ain't much value when Uncle Sammy uses pen and ink, are they, Peto?"

The half-breed closed his eyes obstinately, his lips shut in a curious half moon of bitterness. Chance watched him closely. Peto Frazen, now he was called—outcast from his own people, and from the whites also, because of crooked deals carried off in Indian mortgages. Not by his own wit, however. Chance knew he had been merely the outward symbol of the business intricacies of Leroux, one-time Indian agent, and now a stroller from station to station among the hill camps and prairie ranches, getting money wherever it grew easy. For over three years the two had the reservation Indians, the name of Leroux had been enough to lend confidence to any deal the half-breed proposed, until miles of the best land lay under paper bearing the Leroux stamp.

And from out the far east of red-taped officialdom had swung the thunderbolt. After years of bickering and dallying, the reservation was to be opened up that fall. The Indians had moved northward to good, arable, guaranteed land, homesteaders had crowded in down at Dallas, and, as a side issue, totally unimportant, two light-fingered gentlemen partners had found themselves and their projects annihilated.

"It's too bad, Peto, it sure is," said Chance soothingly. "Who gave you this one?"

Untried showed in Peto's eyes.

"Leroux," he muttered. "He not want me to tell Madeline Nawn."

"Tell what?" demanded Chance. The half-breed shivered, and his head dropped lower on his chest. The sun was half an hour above the line of the earth and sky. Before that time the soul of Peto Frazen now limits, have slipped out past the sky limits. Chance pulled him up on his arm and gave him another drink. He didn't want the soul to slip out before he had all the news.

"Did he try to kill you, Peto?" he asked, bracing the half-breed's head against his own shoulder and knee.

Siwash whinnied anxiously, lifting his nose to the wind.

"He shoot at the girl and the land," began the half-breed slowly. "She draw big land last fall—big Indian land down at Dallas."

"I know," interrupted Chance impatiently. "At the land drawing. Go on, quick."

"No an' Leroux hold Indian mortgage on that land. Last week Leroux finds out there, some silver, some gold. Then he go down an' get old man Nawn, and they play cards, and Leroux gets back the land."

"But it's the girl's land," broke in Chance.

"Sure." Peto's lips formed the words stiffly. "Girl rode down with old man Nawn to buy stuff. Come in where Leroux's making the old man give up, and sit up his big row. Then they chase Leroux an' me out of town, and Leroux says wait for the two out here."

"Wait out here?" Chance lifted up his head and stared dully around at the wide expanse of "out here," miles upon miles of blank, silent land, with no living soul as far as the eye could see.

"What for?"

"To kill old man Nawn. Then we talk about Madeline; and I say I take Madeline, and Leroux shoot me

Chance bent over the form that suddenly grew heavier as he held it. "Which way, Peto, which way?" he cried, shaking the half-breed almost savagely to force him to speak again. And Peto lifted one hand slightly, with a queer, unsteady motion south-east, but he made no answer. Power of speech had left him.

Chance waited a while, staring blankly out at the wide, darkening land with half-shut eyes. When the last sunset glow broke hazily through the still, yellow haze in loam, widening lines of dull red, he mounted Siwash and rode southeast, leaving a defunct half-breed in the dry, muck-caked grasses of the creek bed.

Miles to the southwest lay what had been the reservation land, covered now with the mushroom growth of tents and shacks of the fall homesteaders. Miles north and east stretched the prairie, a great dry sea of tawny, heat-scoured grass; and every time Siwash lifted his nose and sniffed the air, it meant a fresh whiff of fire on the wind.

Chance lifted his hat and rode fast, as fast as he dared with Siwash's dread of a stray badger hole. He knew enough of old man Nawn's weakness and Leroux's far-sighted guile to guess the missing parts in the half-breed's narrative. Leroux held an Indian mortgage on the land drawn by Madeline Nawn. While it didn't amount to the paper it was written on in the eyes of the law, still he had made old Nawn believe the claim was a just one.

Steadily the scrawny, long-limbed pony pushed ahead, his nose pointing out aggressively toward the point his rider aimed at. Just ahead lay old man Nawn's home, a meager dot somewhere out under the waste of the darkening blue sky on the solitary prairie. To Chance that night it was like a sheep shelter and he hurried, hurrying to save it from wolves.

"Home," he muttered. "As if any spot on the face of God's earth could be a home just because it was ground with your own particular tag on it. Si, a few hours back I was homesteek. I wanted some doggone little hole in the ground for a home; wanted plants at the windows, and a rent clothes-line out back, with women's aprons and general dingbats hanging on it, maybe kids' dingbats, too. And in the middle of the dream, Si, was a little girl-woman, understand. Name of Madeline."

He pursed up his lips into a whistle. He had almost forgotten that stark, dead body back in the tangled dry grasses of the creek bed.

"Little bit of a girl-woman, Siwash, with brown eyes and curly hair good needs us now, Si; she sure needs us bad."

There was no moon in the sky. A strange, nebulous glow seemed to overhang the prairie since the night had come on. It was hard to take in a deep, full breath. And suddenly Siwash came to a dead stop, head up, ears pricked forward, listening.

From somewhere out of the darkness ahead there came the troubled whinny of a horse.

Chance, peering keenly ahead, could see nothing; but the noise came again. The land was not level. It lay in long, deep rolls, and Siwash made straight for the nearest dip of land, behind it, at first sight, reposed a peaceful and unsuspecting camp. A couple of ponies were picketed in the shelter of the slope. A buckboard, with boxes of provisions protruding from its buffalo robes, stood by. Under it reposed old man Nawn, sound asleep. But, standing, facing each other, were Jim Leroux and Madeline.

The sound of their voices came clearly on the silence of the night.

"It don't make no difference what you say," Madeline was saying, her head back like a fighting little wildcat. "I know all about you, Jim Leroux. You can't talk your way round me the way you do with daddy. The land belongs to me. I drew it. Daddy never even knew I was putting in a bid for it. It was my idea and mother's. You can't have it. We've lived over since. I can remember in that old shack, and first it wasn't even a shack. It was just a dugout. And daddy ain't got a iota of ambition. He'd just as soon we all died there. But we ain't going to. We're going to have that land of mine—do you hear me?—and we're going to have a real home on it, a cottage-house like mother used to live in back East. And we're going to be real town folks. I know all about you, Jim Leroux." Her voice rose higher.

Chance listened, the muscles of his throat tightening, his hands clenched on Siwash's bridle as he waited.

"You've followed daddy and me out here all the way from town. I ain't afraid of you, do you hear? You can't do a thing to us."

"Can't I?" Leroux threw back his head and laughed.

He was in no hurry. The turn things had taken amused him. He sat down on the buckboard's shaft and looked at the girl. It seemed almost a pity to do what he meant to, and leave the two of them at the mercy of the fire that was certain to come. Perhaps there'd be a chance of saving the girl if she'd behave herself. If she wouldn't tell on him, if she'd let him take down and give up the and before she was aware of his intent he had deliberately shot the two ponies dead.

At Madeline's scream old man Nawn stumbled heavily out from under the buckboard; but, before Leroux could shoot again, there came a noise that checked his move, the steady, hard hand of horse's hoofs, and, ever louder still, a low, queer roar and the soft, quick wind that comes before a prairie fire.

"It's got us!" yelled old Nawn, as he raised both hands helplessly skyward. Leroux rose. His own horse singed safe, and he hesitated, looking at Madeline. And even as he hesitated, there whizzed out over his head the circling line of Chance's lances, larlet, thrown neatly and with precision, until it threw him off the earth, roped as surely and safely as any steer.

"It wasn't that I meant for him to die outright," Chance was fond of explaining. "But there wasn't no time for fine calculations. Here was two dead horses. Here was a prairie fire sweeping down on us like kingdom come, at short range. Here was old Pa Nawn, and over there was my own little girl. How was I to stop and take notice of Jim Leroux against such odds? All I had time to do was to put him out of business. And I sure did. Then pop took his horse, and I swung the little girl up close to me, and we were off. That's all, ain't it, Madeline, honey dear?"

Madeline said, nothing.

"Missus of the ranch, besides a real home in the making, she fed the brown puppies, and let Chance do the talking."

"It sure must have dawned on Jim pretty sudden that he'd landed in the right place when the fire caught him," said Bill as he sorted out flower seed envelopes on the wash bench outside the kitchen door.

"God help him, anyway," whispered Madeline, with a shudder, and she leaned her head back on Chance's shoulder. "Let's have morning stories all over the porch, Chance. And double hollyhocks, pink ones with deep-red hearts, Chance."

"Sure," laughed Chance, kissing her upturned lips. "You can hang Bill and me up for ornaments, if you want to, honey girl. Cause why? Cause he's going to be home. And you won't be lonesome, will you, with just old Bill and me and the dogs?" He gazed at her tenderly.

"Lonesome?" she repeated, her big eyes wide and reproachful. "Lonesome, Chance, where you are?"

Bill looked up thoughtfully at the blue sky and winked with an understanding heart. "The other two were

EACH COMMUNITY WILL SOON HAVE ITS FAVORITE CANDIDATE

Local Pride Will Take a Hand in the Awarding of These Elegant Prizes

The spirit of town rivalry is now beginning to assert itself in the districts outside of Janesville and undoubtedly the lines will be so drawn that in the near future each community or town will pick on one candidate and swing the undivided support to her. Any lady so honored will surely be fortunate and now is the time for a candidate to place herself in such a position.

There are scores of people willing and anxious to help the candidate who displays at least a little interest in her own campaign. As the support she is to receive is regulated entirely by the amount of interest she displays, it is up to the candidate to become interested. A candidate asks a friend to help her and that friend, in turn, informs another friend that he is now working for so and so. When a candidate has a few good friends working she has placed herself in a very advantageous position. But she must make sure that her friends are all busy.

Then there is the candidate who does not trust her welfare, during such an opportunity, in the hands of her friends, but is going after the subscribers herself. This method is all right but the campaign manager feels that each interested candidate should have a few of her friends holding and using receipts books. Give a friend a receipt book and tell him or her to see that it is returned, filled from cover to cover with subscriptions.

Like the politician, figure your strength. If you are a member of a society or organization, see that it renders you the proper amount of support. You would help another member, now let the members help you. Pull every wire in sight. Every candidate in the list knows that she would help a friend under like conditions now give your friends the opportunity of helping you. And the end comes is to be taken into consideration.

The beautiful Overland car is on display at the Nykes & Davis garage on N. Main st.

Rebelle, the automobile comes the "Rebelle" plan, the diamond rings, the jewelry and solid gold watches. All of these valuable awards are transferrable and a ready sale can be found for each.

Each lady has the opportunity of trying for one of these elegant awards and should not be successful she is to be paid in cash for her effort. Consequently, each lady is to be paid for the interest she displays and the amount of interest displayed means a more desirable reward.

The great campaign is now more than half over. In not two weeks from this evening it closes and these elegant prizes will be awarded. It is now time for each candidate to become active.

Now subscriptions give big returns in votes and the candidate that secures their five will receive a good haul of votes.

REST PARLOR FOR MORGAN IN ADJOINING BUILDING.

New York City. The question before Wall street is not what the next move of J. Pierpont Morgan will be in the financial world, but, has he rented the top floor of an adjacent building as a rest parlor, winter and summer.

The one best bet is that he has, although it is stated at his office, that nothing is known of the move. As a matter of fact the architects are preparing the first floor of the Bankers Trust Company, now being erected at the corner of Wall and Nassau streets, not for general offices, but evidently for an attractive sun parlor, and it is stated on good authority that this sun parlor is to be utilized by the famous financier as a sort of rest parlor where he can get complete respite from the noise and confusion of the Wall street office.

In this case, Mr. Morgan will be able to by the tunnel underneath the street across from his office to the Trust Building take a private elevator to the first floor which will be entirely his own and there in the summer time can get the advantage of the pleasant sea breezes and in the winter all the pleasures of a sun parlor, for the floor is practically inclosed in glass. This telephone will be connected by a private telephone to the private offices.

Sea-Going Variety.
Shade of Dionenes—"I suppose I can claim the distinction of having been the only human being that ever lived in a tub." Shade of Noah—"Oh, I don't know; you should have been on the ark one or two breezy nights I recall."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Three Celebrations.
A young couple were married the other day at Brangulham, France, on the same day that the girl's parents celebrated their silver and the bridegroom's parents their golden wedding.

Too Ready With Assistance.
Smith—"Goldmore is a very generous old fellow. Do you know, he's always helping somebody out?" Jones (angry).—"Yes, I know; I was down to see his daughter the other night, and he helped me out, too."—Stray Stories.

The Reason.
"I wonder why gossip travels so fast?" "Because the tongue has which carry it are always on the roll."

Her Help.
Mrs. Penfield—"My husband has found a way by which he says I am of the greatest help to him in his literary work." Mrs. Hillaire—"How nice that must be for you, my dear! But how are you able to do it?" Mrs. Penfield—"As soon as I see him at his desk, I go into another room and keep perfectly quiet until he has finished."—Luck.

Monorail Wheelbarrow.
A monorail wheelbarrow has been invented which will travel on railway rails, and is intended to be used in yards where there are many tracks.

Value of African Peanut.
The African peanut is less delicate than the American as an article of food, but it yields more generously in oil, and is more easily crushed.

Orthodox.
"If St. James' Bible was good enough for St. Paul, it is good enough for me." This was the emphatic protest of a New England deacon against the reading of the Revised instead of the King James version.—Congregationalist.

The Lie.
Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all.—Holmes.

A THOROUGH TEST.
One That Will Convince the Most Skeptical Janesville Reader.
Cures that last are cures that count.

Don't's Kidney Pills make thorough cures.
The following case is typical.
Janesville residents should be convinced.
The testimony is confirmed—the cure lasted.

Proof like this cannot be ignored.
Mrs. William Mohr, 310 N. Academy St., Janesville, Wis., says: "About two years ago I had an attack of kidney trouble and at that time I got a supply of Don't's Kidney Pills at the People's Drug Store. The use of only two boxes cured me. Other members of my family have taken Don't's Kidney Pills with satisfactory results and I therefore know this remedy to be a reliable one." (Statement given in August 1908.)

THE BENEFIT LASTED.
Mrs. Mohr when interviewed on September 23, 1910, said: "I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Don't's Kidney Pills. They permanently cured my kidney complaint and during the past two years, I have had no further need of kidney medicine." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The KINGDOM of SLENDER SWORDS
by HALLIE ERMINE RIVES
Copyright, 1910, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

At length she rose, and with infinite care, inch by inch, pushed back the shutters. The moon had risen, and a flood of moonlight came into the room. Stentily she opened a wain closet and selected her best and gayest robe, a holiday kimono of dim green with lotus flowers and an obi of cloth of gold, with chrysanthemums peeping from the weaves. By the round mirror on her low dressing cabinet she redressed the collar about butterfly of her hair and set a red flower in it. She touched her face with the soft rice powder and added a tint of vermilion to the set pattern of her cheeks. She wrapped in a fur-trimmed robe a slender street clothing, toilet article and a mauve kimono woven with silver camellias, set the handle of the open amado and noiselessly passed into the next room.

It was the larger living apartment. The tiny lamp which burned before the golden shrine of Kwanon, the Buddha, shone out a wan glimmer over the spotless alcove and threw a ghostly light on her dainty. Through the thin-paper shoji she could hear her father's deep breathing, and in the room, in which he slept a little clock chimed 11. She opened the door of the shrine and stood looking at the tablet it held, the that of her mother. The kimono, or soul name, it bore signified "Moon Dawn of the Mountain of Light Dwelling in the Mansion of Luminous Perfume." She rubbed her palms softly together before it, and her lips moved silently. From the golden shadows she seemed suddenly to feel her mother's hand guiding her childish steps to that place of mourning worship, to see that, loving face as she remembered it looking down on her across the rim of years. She bent and passed her hand along the two sword-words, one long, one short, that rested on their lacquered rack beneath the shelf. It was her father's will to her father.

She had left no message. She could tell no one. If she succeeded she would have done her part. If she failed there was only a blank darkness in that thought. But she had no agitation now, only a dull ache.
In her own room she took a book from a drawer and slipped it into her sleeve, caught up the fur-trimmed, carefully closed the amado behind her.
She walked swiftly back to the empty chapel. The great glass window that had seemed so beautiful with the light behind it was now dark and opaque and dead. Only the cross above the roof in the moonlight looked as white as snow. She drew the book from her sleeve. It was her Bible, with her name on the flyleaf. She unlocked the gold chain about her neck and slipped off the little enamel cross. She put this between the leaves of the Bible and laid it on the doorstep.
A half hour later she stood before a wistaria rooted gate in Kasumigakani Cho—the "Street of the Misty Valley"—near Aoyama parade ground. The glass lantern above it threw a dim light on a gravel path twisting through low shrubbery. Down the street she could hear a dozen students chanting the matching song of Hirose Chusa, the young war hero:

"Though the body die, the spirit dies not. He who wished to be reborn Seven times into this world For the sake of serving his country, For the sake of requiting the imperial favor— Has he really died?"

Haru opened the gate. Cherry petals were falling down like rose petals shaken over the scarlet trampling of nauten bushes. A little way inside was a graceful house entrance half shaded by a trailing vine. The amado were not closed; the shop were brilliantly lighted.

ON THE KNEES OF DELIRIUM.
THE room where Phil sat was softly bright with and on, through whose thin paper sides the candlelight altered tran-

Why, your hands are as cold as ice. We'll have a drink, eh?"
He went into an outer room, came back with a bottle of champagne and knocked off its neck against the mantel.
"Yes, yes!" she said. "My mother drink so to be gay, Phil-Phil!" She drank the bubbling liquor at a draught. "What are the uses of to be good?"
"You're right, little girl. The plump people are the dull ones." He came to her unsteadily. "So you'll train with me, eh? Well, I'll show them a trick or two. How would you like to have plenty of money, Haru, as much as you can count on a koroban?"
"You so much clever!" she laughed. "No all same Japan man. He very stupid. My think you must be clever man in these whole world to get so much money?"
With a savage elation he drew her close in his arms.

Mr. Y. Nakajima, the almond eyed guide of gold filled teeth, came to the end of his elaborate conversation. He turned from the old servant, leaning on his pruning knife, and spoke to the man who stood waiting outside the wistaria gate in the Street-of-the-Misty Valley.

"How Mr. Philip Ware stay here," he announced, "but house is owner ship of his friend, Mr. Daunt of American Embassy. He regret sadly that no one are not at home."
Ware reflected. Daunt's house? He lived in the embassy house? He had said last night. Why should he maintain this native house in another quarter of Tokyo?

There came to his mind that backneyed phrase, "the custom of the country," the foreigner's specious justification of the modern "Madame Butterfly." In this interminable city, with its labyrinthine mazes, who could tell what this or that gray roof might shelter?

Ware struck his stick hard against the hedge. He scarcely knew what thought entered his mind, so nebulous was it, so indefinable. If he had thought to use this discovery he knew his way; if it was Daunt's covert, he was Phil in possession.

"Ask him if he has any idea where he is."
The guide translated. The servant was ignominiously unacquainted with the danna-San's illustrious habits. He arrogantly presumed to suggest that he might eagerly be in any one of a hundred antiques spots.

Ware thought a moment frowningly. "Tell him I am Ware-San's brother," he said then, "and that I have just arrived in Tokyo. I shall wait in the house till he comes."

The old man bowed profoundly at the statement of the relationship. He spoke at some length to the guide. The latter looked at Ware questioningly, but hesitated.

"Well?" asked the other tartly.
"He think better please you wait to the hotel."

Ware struck upon the gate with a date of irritation. "You can go now," he said to the guide and, disdaining the servant, strode along the gravel path and entered the house.

Under the trailing vine Ware slid back the shoji and entered the house. As he stood looking at the interior his lip curled. He hated the cheapness and vulgarity to which Phil turned with insatiable liking, and he had long ago come thoroughly to despise his younger brother and to rebuke the whip-hand which the law, with its guarantee, gave him. The place fitted Phil, from the elegant color to the loud photograph in the dragon frame and the partly open wall closet with its significant array of bottles. It expressed his idea of "a good time."

He shut his teeth. The camellia had always been Barbara's favorite flower.

His Economy.
The children in the Blank family were taught habits of neatness at the table by being compelled to pay a fine of 1 cent for every spot they put on the tablecloth. One day Harold, a boy of seven years, was discovered rubbing the overhanging part of the cloth between his fingers, and, when taken to task for it, he said: "Why, Mummy, I was just trying to rub two spots into you!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Showing the Englishman.
Englishman (patronizingly)—"Your school faculties are excellent, I am told." American (sneeringly)—"Well, I should say. See the Smithsonian Institution over there? Think of a building like that, just to educate the Smiths."—Vogue.

THE PLACE FITTED PHIL.

Meanwhile the girl thus incongruously in his thought had felt a gray shadow across her sunshine. She found her uncle greatly perplexed and troubled. Haru's Bible, found on the chapel doorstep, had been brought to him that morning. He had sent at once to the Street-of-Prayer-to-the-Gods, and the messenger had returned with news of her disappearance. The fact that she had taken clothing with her showed that the flight was a deliberate one. It pinned him to think what the return of the book and the little cross might mean. In his long residence in Japan the bishop had grown accustomed to strange denunciations, to flashing revelations of subtle depths in oriental character. But save for one instance of many years ago, when the sight of Barbara must always recall to him, he had never been so suddenly taken by today's disclosure. What he told her had left Barbara with an uneasy apprehension. She drove away pondering. The anxious speculation blurred the glimmer of the afternoon.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters
The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.
No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.
The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.
The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

Indian's Skill In Making Stone Implements Discredited

Important Contribution to American Archeology Made by H. L. Skavlem, Who Has Discovered Means by Which Indians Made Their Stone Axes and War-Clubs—Has Fashioned Implements With Own Hands in Very Short Time, Showing Proverbial Skill and Patience of Red Men is a Myth—How Discovery Was Made

Introductory Note.—Years of scientific investigation were spent by Mr. Skavlem among the mound groups and village sites of the Lake Koshkonong region preceding his discovery which is treated in this article. In 1900 Mr. Skavlem and Mr. A. H. Stout of the state university started the work of making a collection of the materials found on the Indian village sites, and subsequently made a systematic survey of the mound groups of the entire lake region.

White Crow's village, however, proved the most valuable place for the collection of relics. Although now under cultivation the site of this old village is one of the most beautiful on the entire lake. It is located at what is known as "Carcajón Point" on the southwest shore, the high point commanding a wide view of the lake and shores opposite. The point juts into the lake from the northwest, terminating in a limestone cliff, about thirty feet above the beach. The edge of the cliff is fringed with fine trees and shrubs and is overgrown with vines, moss and ferns. Just back of the shore-line is the historic wood of oak, elm and linden, where the families of White Crow's Winnebago tribe erected their lodges. White Crow's Winnebago name was "Kau-ray-law-aw-kaw," and he was a chief of importance during the Black Hawk war.

It was in this village site which extends along the shore for over a mile and back for nearly half a mile, that Mr. Skavlem made a very complete collection of Indian implements of all descriptions. These were classified and form a very valuable collection which was presented to the state museum in 1910.

It was while engaged in making another and more representative collection of relics on this same village site, that Mr. Skavlem made his important discovery which will be of over increasing value to students of American archeology.

Regarding the American Indian of much of the credit which has been accorded him for skill and perseverance in shaping his implements of stone, the discovery of H. L. Skavlem of what he claims to be the exact methods and the very tools which the Red-men employed to fashion his axes and war clubs, is one of the most valuable of recent contributions to American archeology.

Mr. Skavlem does not mean to be understood as claiming that he is the first white man to make stone implements by pecking and grinding with other stones. This has been done in an experimental way by several others, McGuire being generally conceded as the most successful in this line of work.

Establishes "Dench Mark." But Mr. Skavlem believes that he is the first in discovering the very identical tools with which the Indian shaped his stone axes, and using those very same tools to make exactly the same kind of stone implements that the Indian made, so that we now know just how the Indians at White Crow's village, Lake Koshkonong, where the discovery was made, made their axes, celts and other stone implements.

It is thought that he has established a "dench mark" in the study of archaic manufacture of stone implements from which it will be possible to extend lines of investigation in various directions, and that this "dench mark" will be of much value to the students of archeology in giving pointers and shedding new light on many an obscure problem.

Gives Illustration. "To illustrate what I mean," said Mr. Skavlem, as he picked up several pieces of broken stone implements, "here are three broken celts. With the new light given us by the pecking hammer and the grinding stone, let me read you the secrets of the past as given to us now by these pieces of broken stone."

"You will observe that the bit or sharp cutting edge of this one is perfect—no nicks or breaks, but a keen, smooth, sharp, well-polished ax. About an inch up the blade and extending up to the fracture you see the unmistakable pitting marks of the pecking hammer. This extends down into the polished part of the ax, unevenly, more on one side than the other. The owner was reshaping the body of this tool, making it symmetrical, improving its looks. Up near the break you notice the pitting is coarser and deeper. He was in a hurry to re-shape the ax, struck hard blows, and it broke."

"Now let us see what this one can tell us," he said, referring to the second piece. "This is also the bit or sharp end of the celt. But here's another record. You will observe that this is very blunt, badly nicked and unfit for any cutting purpose. It must be sharpened to be of any use. About one and a half inches back from the blunt edge of the celt on either side you notice a small space of the old polish remaining, showing that at one time it had been a perfect tool and an well shaped and polished as the other celt, when it was in perfect order."

Are New Witnesses. "Now, with the exception of the two spots as you see, it is rough and shows the unmistakable marks of the pecking hammer. This side is brought near to a rough edge, while here on the other side it needs quite a bit more thinning down to bring it in shape for the grinding stone. Mr. Indian was evidently anxious to finish his job and struck a little too hard. And so here we have undoubtedly a celt broken when undergoing repair."

"This third one—you can now read the story for yourself; it broke off, pecking on both sides to bring it back to an edge, and it broke."

"With our new light these implements little bits of stone give us quite a record of the every-day happenances of the Indian life at Carcajón Point, Lake Koshkonong, for the state archeological museum at Madison, that Mr. Skavlem has upon his present theory of Indian implement manufacturing almost incidentally. Mr. Skavlem's idea of securing such a collection met the approval of Charles E. Brown, curator of the state museum, as well as other members of the state society. The work was carried on with the idea of making a continue his experiment, he was surprised to find that there were no sharp edges, but that it showed the same percussion fractures on the edges as did the stone he had just discarded. From appearances it had evidently been used in exactly the same manner as Mr. Skavlem had used the one he just dropped and like a revelation came the idea to him that he held in his hand the very tool with which the Indian, perhaps several centuries ago, had pecked out his stone axes and other implements.

He then picked up the stone he had discarded and resumed the pecking experiment. He soon discovered that he had done more rapid work after the sharp edges of his pecking hammer had been battered off; that the implement sharpened itself at every stroke he made and the small conchoidal fractures constantly presenting a multiplied number of sharp cutting edges.

Polishing Crude Ax. Continuing to pick at the celt in his hand Mr. Skavlem found that he was able to bring it to a rough edge in a comparatively short time. He set to work with renewed activity and succeeded in making a fairly perfect article in a remarkably short period of time.

The work of polishing, however, remained. At this particular point at Lake Koshkonong there is an outcropping of St. Peter's sandstone with the flintstone. This sandstone at this juncture or outcropping is found to contain, or the particles are composed with a small amount of iron (hematite) which makes a slab of the material valuable for polishing any stone surface. That the Indian made use of these pieces of sandstone is attested on every hand, for in the fields and on the lake shore fragments of the material are found with concave grooves indicating that they had been used as rubbing stones to grind and polish and finish their stone implements.

Ax Is Completed. Using a piece of this sandstone similar to the specimens at hand and working at the edge of the lake where a small amount of water might be applied, Mr. Skavlem found that he was able to polish the surface of a rough ax' very easily. He readily made an implement which shaped itself naturally and perfectly as he continued to rub it over the rough sandstone, demonstrating that it was possible to make an ax of any good shape and polish by this seemingly crude method of an artificial means which a white man might employ with motor driven emery wheel and mechanical polishers.

It was easy to see how the Indian must have taken a small piece of the sandstone and rubbed it around the groove in the upper part of the ax and in this manner Mr. Skavlem was able to smooth this part of the implement as well as the rest so that the whole appeared to be as perfect as a great many of the Indian specimens. This initial effort from the first discovery to the finishing up of the implement took scarcely half a day. It took less time to make the second one and after several were made it became possible to make a very good ax within several hours' time.

A Particular Specimen. One specimen especially which Mr. Skavlem was very successful in making was shaped from a large granite shad-head which he picked up in the field. It was nearly round, about six inches in diameter and two inches through in the thickest part. From this he shaped an ax about four and a half inches long and three inches or less in width, and slightly thinner than the original stone. The chipping down of the crude stone and the entire polishing process together was completed in four hours and a half. The ax is very nearly perfect in outline and appearance and an expert along the lines of Indian archeology who was not acquainted with Mr. Skavlem's methods, would pronounce it a very valuable and remarkably well preserved Indian ax, although it has been made at the present time, less than six weeks ago.

Mr. Skavlem states, however, that the wise Indian ax-maker would scarcely be so foolish as to pick out a stone of such a shape as the above described one from which to make an ax! They would rather prefer to find a stone which came nearer the size and shape of the implement which they wished to make. Then there would be less pecking with the chert hammer and the desired shape before grinding on the sandstone polisher would be more easily attained.

Small Hammer-Stones. Mr. Skavlem says that perhaps the way in which he was first attracted to the final discovery was his attention to certain small, round and very regular stones which are very commonly found about the Indian village sites and which show unmistakable marks of pecking on each side. In pecking on another stone with the sharp point of a broken chert nodule, he saw that the marks which one saw were very easily made and that the Indian evidently used them as hammer stones, and had a large number of them at hand in his hut or about the camp.

The sharp-cornered flints were undoubtedly used against the stone from which an ax was made at the finishing stage by one of these hammer-stones in order to do the chipping carefully and not make any mistakes which would cause waste of time and labor.

What Collection Shows. There are many chert nodules with the original sharp edges worn off, and they still show the very sharp saw-like fractures which were caused by the pounding on other stones. Mr. Skavlem has a collection of these stones and a comparison of them with the stones which he has used, indicates that the Indians used them in the same manner and undoubtedly for the same purpose.

Making a collection of the articles used by Mr. Skavlem in designing and making his axes, it will be found that no museum or representative collection contains a representation of these implements which seem to have been overlooked. Hammer-stones are very commonly found. The chipped and fractured cherts are picked up in large numbers around White Crow's village site, but they have been classed solely as material for arrow heads.

The sandstones with the concave grooves are found in even larger numbers all over the place and appear identical with the stones as they appear after Mr. Skavlem has been using them to polish axes which he has made—the same hollows are found on both sides of the stone, if both sides are used.

Simple And Natural. The finished articles in both cases sharpened at one end, attached to a bone handle which in many cases, was the remainder of the bone itself. Then carefully pressing and prying on the edge of the flint from which the arrow is made the shape can be very easily obtained. The simplest kind of arrows are the triangular shaped ones. The shaped arrows require but a slight amount of additional work in working out the indentation which forms the shaft. With special care and accuracy it is possible to make each chipping regular and very close together, giving the appearance of a saw. Working carefully in this manner it is easy to see how some very fine specimens might be, and were turned out.

Attainments Ordinary. Mr. Skavlem has proved that this was the method employed by the actual experiments and has made some arrow-points from other material than flint, including several pieces of glass. While he has not taken enough time to make as good specimens of arrows as of axes and war-clubs, he has made the experiment to the extent of satisfying himself that this was the manner in which the Indian secured his arrow-points, and that the ordinary are exactly the same. Experts can find point was the result of "but a small amount of work to the average Indian."

He says that it is only reasonable to suppose that the Indian would make the exceedingly large number of arrows which it required to carry on his occupations of hunting and fighting, only by an easy and natural method. He did not have either the time or the inclination to make his arrows by any other than the shortest and simplest way. And so the entire discovery worked out by Mr. Skavlem merely indicates that the American Red-man was a very ordinary aborigine, as far as his attainments in manufacturing, at least, were concerned, and that his highly heralded skill in fashioning his stone implements is far from the actual truth of the matter.

Mr. Skavlem expects to embody his discovery; how he arrived at it; and what it means to American archeology, in a bulletin which will be published by the Wisconsin Archeological Society, sometime within the coming year.

As soon as the white trader brought steel knives and spears and axes, the Red-man at once forgot how to make stone implements and used the more handy ready-made articles. He was always anxious to get results in the easiest and most convenient way.

Patience Exaggerated. His much discussed skill and ingenuity was the only natural and simple method of attaining desired results.

Attainments Ordinary. Mr. Skavlem has proved that this was the method employed by the actual experiments and has made some arrow-points from other material than flint, including several pieces of glass. While he has not taken enough time to make as good specimens of arrows as of axes and war-clubs, he has made the experiment to the extent of satisfying himself that this was the manner in which the Indian secured his arrow-points, and that the ordinary

He says that it is only reasonable to suppose that the Indian would make the exceedingly large number of arrows which it required to carry on his occupations of hunting and fighting, only by an easy and natural method. He did not have either the time or the inclination to make his arrows by any other than the shortest and simplest way. And so the entire discovery worked out by Mr. Skavlem merely indicates that the American Red-man was a very ordinary aborigine, as far as his attainments in manufacturing, at least, were concerned, and that his highly heralded skill in fashioning his stone implements is far from the actual truth of the matter.

Mr. Skavlem expects to embody his discovery; how he arrived at it; and what it means to American archeology, in a bulletin which will be published by the Wisconsin Archeological Society, sometime within the coming year.

son who cared to exert himself, as history has shown. As soon as the white trader brought steel knives and spears and axes, the Red-man at once forgot how to make stone implements and used the more handy ready-made articles. He was always anxious to get results in the easiest and most convenient way.

Patience Exaggerated. And so, the most proverbial patience which has been accorded the early Indians is very much of a myth; and the wonder which everyone, including archeologists, have evinced at beautiful specimens exhibited in museums has been wasted on efforts which the expert Indian ax-maker was able to turn out in a comparatively short time. His much discussed skill and ingenuity was the only natural and simple method of attaining desired results.

It is very possible, however, that certain Indian tribes were more active they still show the very sharp saw-like fractures which were caused by the pounding on other stones. Mr. Skavlem has a collection of these stones and a comparison of them with the stones which he has used, indicates that the Indians used them in the same manner and undoubtedly for the same purpose.

Making a collection of the articles used by Mr. Skavlem in designing and making his axes, it will be found that no museum or representative collection contains a representation of these implements which seem to have been overlooked. Hammer-stones are very commonly found. The chipped and fractured cherts are picked up in large numbers around White Crow's village site, but they have been classed solely as material for arrow heads.

The sandstones with the concave grooves are found in even larger numbers all over the place and appear identical with the stones as they appear after Mr. Skavlem has been using them to polish axes which he has made—the same hollows are found on both sides of the stone, if both sides are used.

Simple And Natural. The finished articles in both cases sharpened at one end, attached to a bone handle which in many cases, was the remainder of the bone itself. Then carefully pressing and prying on the edge of the flint from which the arrow is made the shape can be very easily obtained. The simplest kind of arrows are the triangular shaped ones. The shaped arrows require but a slight amount of additional work in working out the indentation which forms the shaft. With special care and accuracy it is possible to make each chipping regular and very close together, giving the appearance of a saw. Working carefully in this manner it is easy to see how some very fine specimens might be, and were turned out.
